Women join forces to improve community

■ Idea is to pool resources to change the county

By Beth Smith

Several years ago, an idea took root in the hearts of a group of Henderson County women.

They wanted to form a team of dedicated women who would be committed to making Henderson an even better community in which to live.

"We just started jotting down women" who might be interested, said Jennifer Keach.

"But then life, kids, jobs ... got in the way" said Leanne Banna-Pritchett, adding that before they knew it, years passed.

"I'd been at Boulware (Mission) in Owensboro and heard about a women's group in Owensboro," Karen Wilson said. "I knew that Leanne and the others had (a similar) idea."

"We all had the idea," Banna-Pritchett said. "We're all in this together."

The women said they simply needed an opportunity, and they found it with the recently established Community Foundation of Henderson.

"We're a branch of the community foundation," Banna-Pritchett said.

The women's group is called Partnership of Women, or POW.

Their kickoff event will take place from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday at Ruby Moon Vineyard and Winery. Women in the community are invited to attend to receive more information.

There is no fundraising, no canvassing, no buying somebody's stuff, no endless meetings, no car washes. You give annually, and $500 gives you a vote on where that money is donated.

The day that shook Henderson

Many people in Henderson recall the massive Ellis Grain elevator explosion 25 years ago.

At right, city firemen approach the scene of the Ellis Grain elevator explosion soon after the blast occurred.

It was one of the largest – if not the largest – explosions Henderson ever experienced. The regulatory, recuperating and rebuilding dust still was settling a year later. The elevator wasn't reopened until nearly 21 months later and at a reduced capacity, going from 1 million bushels to 700,000 bushels.

Below, firefighters and other rescue workers remove the body of one of the victims after the blast, which killed three and seriously injured two others.

The fatalities were John Hughes, 40, of Reed; Gary A. Gross, 28, of Henderson; and Thomas A. Kurtz, 24, of Baskett.

The two survivors, both of whom were badly burned, were Joseph E. Yates, 38, and Richard Thomas, 33, both of Henderson.

Both eventually returned to work for the grain company, and Thomas still does to this day. Read and see more about this historic event today in Frank Boyett's "Yesterday's news" column, Page 5A.

It's going to be slick out there

■ Rain, freezing rain expected

Gleaner staff

Plunging temperatures are expected to turn rain into freezing rain and sleet by midafternoon today, according to the National Weather Service in Paducah.

Once the precipitation ends late tonight, the area could receive as much as a quarter-inch of ice buildup, which could cause driving and walking hazards, said meteorologist Robin Smith of the NWS.

Roadways will be slickest overnight tonight as the temperature drops to around 20 degrees, he said.

The ice comes on the heels of what NWS was projecting to be between 1 to 3 inches of rain between Saturday and today, including heavy downpours during thunderstorms. The weather service issued a flash-flood watch that went into effect at 3 p.m. Saturday and continues until this afternoon.

NWS also issued a tornado warning for Henderson and Union counties Saturday afternoon. A weather spotter reported sighting a funnel cloud or possible tornado in Waverly shortly after 4 p.m., as the storm moved northwest toward downtown Evansville.

There also was a reported funnel cloud sighting in Henderson near U.S. 41-Alternate and Kentucky 425. Central Dispatch said an officer was sent to the area and was unable to confirm a funnel cloud sighting. There were no reports of damage in Henderson, Union or Webster counties from Saturday's storm.

Rain or freezing rain is predicted before 1 p.m. today, with freezing rain

Corydon sewer customers eligible for refunds

By Frank Boyett
270-831-8342

Corydon residential sewer customers are eligible for refunds because, up until recently, the city incorrectly was levying sales tax on sewer service since the sewer system was installed in 1994.

A customer can get reimbursement only for the past four years, and the only amount to be reimbursed would be the 6 percent sales and use tax, according to Corydon Mayor Philip Brewster. "We're trying to figure out how to go back and generate a (computer) report to do that," he said.

He estimated the average sales tax reimbursement for the past four years might be as much as $100, but the city could recoup that money from the state Revenue Cabinet. "We would be refunded by the state for the money we sent to them," he said. "It might hit us hard at first, but we're not going to be out anything."

The state Revenue Cabinet confirmed it would reimburse the city for any money it repaid, but it would not do so until after the city has repaid the money to customers.

Brewster stressed the city has not benefited from the mistake: "It's collected and then we send the money to the state. It's not like the city is keeping that money."

It's unclear how the mistake was made back when the sewer system was ratified in November 1990; it first came on line in 1994.

"In the ordinance, it has the 6 percent sales tax on it," City Clerk Gloria Mills said.

RECYCLING

This is "B" week for curbside recycling by Allied Waste Services. Here is the schedule:
Your curbside recycling pick-up day is the same day as your city of Henderson garbage collection service if you live on the proper side of the dividing line:
Monday customers will be those east of Green River Road. Tuesday will be those east of U.S. 41.
Wednesday will be those south of Clay Street/Airline Road. Thursday will be those south of Clay Street.
Friday will be those south of Sand Lane/Madison Street.

'Change happens': Hospital's free forum shows how to make resolutions positive

Let's go back about 80,000 years to a certain Neanderthal woman and her mate, who are having an awkward moment.

The female is examining closely the outline her sweetie drew of her on the wall of the cave where they live.

"Gerk," she says, "I'm not that big, am I?"

Gerk studies his feet for a moment, then shrugs.

With the next new moon, she pledges, she will eat nothing but berries, nuts and maybe a few twigs several days a week until she regains her youthful form.

That, my friends, is called a resolution, and the air has been thick with them for eons — especially at this time of the year.

Lieber Street home destroyed by fire

Gleaner staff

A one-story house at 413 Lieber St. was destroyed by heavy fire damage Saturday afternoon.

The house was occupied, but no one was home at the time of the fire, said Jerry Long, assistant chief with Henderson Fire Department. Central Dispatch received a report of a structure fire at 1:19 p.m.

When firefighters arrived at the Lieber Street location, there were no flames visible, he said, but heavy smoke was coming from the front and back doors and many of the windows.

However, inside there was fire throughout the house, which was approximately 900 square feet.

The house was a "total loss," Long said. The surrounding properties were not damaged.

Firefighters cleared the scene shortly after 4 p.m., after having not only to contend with fire but also heavy rain.

The cause of the fire is under investigation, but it appears to be unintentional, he said.

The displaced family was in contact with the Red Cross for assistance.

City Commission to discuss plans for Green River Road

Gleaner staff

Engineering plans for upgrading Green River Road are 90 percent complete, and the Henderson City Commission will review them when it meets in a workshop at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday evening.

Palmer Engineering has been working on the plans the past several months in conjunction with local input that involved city officials, local utilities and the state Transportation Cabinet. The road currently has 20-foot-wide pavement with open ditches on either side.

The plan for the first phase — about a half-mile between Osage Drive and Woodspoint Drive — is to make the road wider with curbs, gutters and sidewalks.

The workshop is in the top-floor meeting room of the Henderson Municipal Center. The only other items to be discussed are what priorities the commission wants to focus on during the next two years.

Teen charged with threatening officials

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON— Court records show an eastern Kentucky teen is facing charges after accusations he threatened to kill two federal judges and a prosecutor.

The student is accused of making the statements to a school counselor at the Appalachian Challenge Academy in Harlan County. The statement says the student threatened to shoot those involved in prosecuting his father on a child porn charge.

Planners to elect officers

Gleaner staff

The Henderson City-County Planning Commission will hold its annual organizational meeting at 6 p.m. Monday at the Public Safety Building overlooking the cloverleaf.

The main items on the agenda are election of officers, presentation of the 2012 annual report, which lists all of the office's accomplishments the past year, and approval of the work program for 2013, which is the Planning Commission's to-do list for the coming year.

Details of the annual report and work program were not available, but will be presented at the meeting.

The Planning Commission also will consider a request from Susan Cox Development LLC formally to close the right of way for a never-developed alley through the Dollar General Market property at 335 U.S. 41-South.

It also will consider a request from Billy Ray, Velma Daugherty and David and Penny Wathen to approve consolidating two lots at 484 and 492 Newman-Stillhouse Road.

Planning Commission approval is required because the properties are in a flood hazard area.

Breathitt interchange in Evansville MPO plan

U.S. 60 bridge at Spottsville also to be replaced

Scripps Newspapers

Reconstruction of the U.S. 41 and Lloyd Expressway interchange, along with projects on Oak Hill Road, Lincoln Avenue and Oak Grove Road highlight the Evansville Metropolitan Planning Organization's new draft transportation improvement program.

The plan for 2013-16 also includes improvements to a Breathitt Parkway interchange just south of Henderson, Ky., and replacement of the U.S. 60 bridge over the Green River at Spottsville, Ky.

The Evansville MPO includes Vanderburgh, Warrick and Henderson counties. Numerous projects of all sizes are outlined in the draft. Many of them are to be funded by a combination of federal, state and local sources.

An open house concerning the complete Evansville MPO transportation improvement program will be held 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday in Room 301 of the Civic Center.

The full plan includes dozens of large and small road and bridge projects in the three counties. It is available at www.evansvillempo.com.

"We invite the public to come and ask questions about projects in the plan or not in the plan," said Craig Luebke, an Evansville MPO transportation planner.

Previously announced plans to remake the U.S. 41 and Lloyd Expressway interchange as a full cloverleaf will eliminate traffic lights at the intersection on the Lloyd. Construction is scheduled for this year and next. The listed cost is $30.4 million.

The second phase of Oak Hill Road reconstruction, from Pigeon Creek to Lynch Road, is to begin later this year. Phase I was completed in 2011.

Evansville City Engineer Pat Keeper said the finished product will have a center turn lane, with new sidewalks and storm sewers, plus a bicycle path. The project, projected to cost $5.8 million, will be advertised for bids by the state this spring.

Oak Grove Road, a busy corridor stretching from commercial development in Evansville to residential areas in Warrick County, is to see three phases of improvements over the next few years.

Phase I will be from just east of I-64 to Libbert Road, and it will widen Oak Grove to four lanes. The listed cost is $8.45 million, and construction is to begin this year.

The next two phases will widen Oak Grove to three lanes from Libbert Road to Bell Road ($3 million) and from Bell Road to Indiana 261 ($5.5 million).

Replacing the bridge at Spottsville will cost $25 million, and a 2015 construction date is scheduled. The plan's other major Henderson County project, on the Breathitt Parkway at Exit 68, is to begin this year. A new northbound off-ramp and a southbound on-ramp at Kentucky 416 will be built.

Traveling art exhibit displayed at S. Middle

Gleaner staff

Beginning Monday, South Middle School will be the temporary home to a traveling exhibit that features art made by students with disabilities.

"A Matter of Perspective" is an annual juried exhibit that showcases artwork crafted by students with disabilities across Kentucky. This year's exhibit features 28 pieces of artwork in a variety of styles and media, according to a news release.

The exhibit travels to schools, libraries, galleries and other public places across the state. It can be viewed at South from Monday through Friday.

"A Matter of Perspective" is sponsored by the State Organization on Arts and Disability VSA Kentucky. VSA Kentucky, which is affiliated with the John F. Kennedy for the Arts program VSA, is a statewide nonprofit organization that provides art education and inclusion programs for children and adults with disabilities and spotlights the accomplishments of those artists.

For more information about the exhibit, call Tracy Belfield, a teacher at the school, at 831-5050 or email tracy.belfield@henderson.kyschools.us.

Community kicks off 2013 with good news

Many had a pretty bad year in 2012 and wished it past with a hearty, "Good riddance." Many predict an even worse year in 2013.

Before we teeter on the edge of yet another fiscal cliff while our leaders doodle their lines in the sand or we endure another unfathomable act of violence fueled by hatred or madness, let's look on the bright side of the new year. At least close to home there's been some good news stories to report, all in just the past week:

■ The Henderson County Detention Center was one of just three jails in the state of Kentucky chosen to run a new substance abuse program.

The state will pay the county to house 50 female inmates who will go through a six-month program of drug abuse treatment. The treatment program will also be funded by the state.

The new program will bolster the county jail's financial position, and more importantly might be the way some people get out of the vicious cycle of drug abuse, crime and incarceration.

"Hopefully it will help people, help get them back on the right track," said County Judge-executive Hugh McCormick. "Not everybody sitting in a jail today needs to be in a jail. Some of them need to be in substance abuse programs."

It looks like a win-win. ■ Trout fishing at Sandy Lee Watkins Park?

County officials said last week that the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife is likely to include our new park in a program that stocks lakes with trout every winter and opens them to fishing.

It would be bonus to fishermen who have already enjoyed the fishing at Sandy Lee and are looking forward to the park re-opening. Work on a new handicapped accessible lake is going on out there as well.

A devotee of farm pond fishing, I've never fished for trout. Would I need a fly rod? I might get so tangled up in the line I'd need to be rescued from myself. But as they say, "A bad day fishing is better than a good day at work."

■ The same day the good news for Sandy Lee Park was reported, Henderson Fiscal Court had high praise for two young members of our community for doing their best as citizens.

Brynna Phillips and Lauren Fambrough, fifth-graders with Niagara Girl Scout Troop 1279, showed up before all the county government grown-ups to present their plan to make the county fairgrounds safer by installing new traffic control signs.

DAVID DIXON

EDITOR

"There are cars going every which way and someone could get hurt," young Miss Fambrough explained to the court.

The Scouts set a good example in another way as well. In a move that might not occur to some adult citizens, they refused the county's offer to pay for the new signs. Instead they passed $200 along to the county that they had raised to support their project.

■ Speaking of good citizens, you might have seen the story last week about Army veteran and local Constable Jackie Williams' personal campaign to make sure American flags are properly displayed and disposed of when they are in disrepair.

He's seen it all during his travels around the area, and a tattered flag or one not properly displayed gets his patriotic dander up.

If you have a flag that's seen better days and don't know how to dispose of it with the proper respect, give Williams a call at 831-0634. He'll take care of it.

"This is about our veterans," he said. "This is about our country. It's about our flag."

■ Local high school basketball fans are having a good year so far and looking forward to even better times ahead.

Going into Friday night games, the Henderson County Colonels were 13-2 and the Lady Colonels were 11-1. They've both beaten some good area teams along the way. Both teams play hard and with heart.

On the girls side, Jeff Haile has been at the coaching helm for 27 years and is working his magic yet again. We're lucky to have him.

Boys coach Tyler Smithhart, a former Colonel in his second year as a head coach and first year here, is getting the hometown fans pumped up as well.

From good citizens to good basketball, maybe 2013 won't be so gloomy after all.

House could cause chaos with shutdown

You have to admire the quirkiness of the ideas being put forward to solve our fiscal mess, in lieu of doing the real work of governing.

The most interesting is the trillion dollar coin, which would be minted out of pure platinum and stored by the Treasury Department as an asset. Presumably, we would all go to our safety deposit boxes and pull out our platinum jewelry and take off our wedding rings and send them to Washington. (Just sorting the real from the fake would be quite a feat.)

The resulting coin would be so gigantic it would need a cavernous new government facility, which every legislator would want in his/her state. It would never get built because that would take an act of Congress, and it's clear Congress doesn't know how to act.

Strangely, the White House did not immediately ridicule this idea.

Then there is the let's-make-friends-with-China policy. Since every dollar we spend that isn't related to entitlement spending such as Medicare or Social Security is borrowed from China, the idea is to become best buddies so

COLUMNIST

China will keep lending money to us. Eventually, we would all have to speak Mandarin, forget about the Internet and give them the West Coast.

Of real currency (ha ha) in the House at least, is the idea of refusing to raise the debt ceiling and shutting down the government. This would cause worldwide recession and financial instability but, no matter, those spendthrift bureaucrats would be taught a lesson. When their offices had no heat or power and all activity by government ceased — inspecting food, watching out for terrorists, keeping airplanes in the air, making the big boys play fair — they'd be sorry.

This idea comes from people who were elected to Congress apparently without ever taking Economics 101 or learning what the debt ceiling actually means.

They think failing to raise the debt ceiling means sticking it to President Barack Obama and not letting him spend more money.

There are a few problems with this thesis: The debt ceiling refers to paying for what Congress already has spent. The president of the United States does not spend money; Congress does.

No Congress has ever voted against raising the debt ceiling. The nation would have no money to pay its debts. No one would lend to us. We would lose all financial respect. Soon we would be living in a banana republic without the bananas.

Many believe Washington wastes so much money the only way to stop it is to close it all down. That may sound appealing. But it would mean chaos.

There would be no Social Security checks, no grants to researchers on the brink of new discoveries, no air traffic controllers, no disaster relief, no pay to soldiers or their families, no safety standards for hospital equipment or bioengineered new foods or air pollution standards. If civil unrest broke out in cities, no Army reserves would move in to quell the violence. Armed gangs would patrol election booths. Nobody would resolve disputes among states. Goodbye to flu vaccines and major road improvement projects.

To avoid a government shutdown if the debt ceiling is not raised, some want the president to invoke the 14th Amendment and go ahead with borrowing. This undoubtedly would invite another impeachment crisis.

Some want Obama to issue IOUs or scrip to government workers and contractors, Social Security recipients and hospitals and doctors treating the elderly.

When Treasury got enough money, scrip could be redeemed for cash. The precedent is California, which ran out of money in 2009 and issued scrip until the legislature got its act together to permit redemption.

One wonders how many grocery stores and power companies would be sympathetic to people clutching handfuls of paper scrip waiting for Congress to authorize its debts to be paid.

There is a more reasonable solution. It's called compromise.

Education must be national security priority

President Barack Obama completed his national security team last week, naming his choices for secretaries of state and defense and the director of the CIA. But he forgot to announce one official who, by his own words, will be key to setting America's global security priorities. Namely, his secretary of education.

It is a proposition the president signed on to two years ago. But it hasn't been discussed much since then. Not nearly enough, in fact.

It was on Oct. 12, 2010, in an arena not usually associated with policymaking that Obama was asked to consider a new way of looking at U.S. education policy priorities. The president was performing like the ringmaster in a one-ring circus at a town hall webcast at The George Washington University, just weeks before the midterm election.

Obama called on a young woman in the front row, Francesca Yabraian from Texas, who is now a career employee at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and who that day asked a question you'd expect to hear at a think tank symposium, not a campaign event.

"Mr. President, you have pointed out that U.S. students have fallen from the top 20 nations in math and science and test scores — and jobs and contracts are going overseas," Yabraian began. "You've called education a national priority. But do you think it is time to label education funding a national security priority?"

MARTIN SCHRAM

It was a question and proposition Obama clearly hadn't anticipated.

"I think it's a national security priority," he began; he had that furrowed-brow look he gets when he knows it's time to be thinking on his feet. The more he thought, the more he warmed to the proposition.

"Look, there has never been a nation on Earth that lost its economic edge and maintained its military edge," Obama said. "And the reason we have the most effective military on earth, in the history of the world, is first and foremost because we have unbelievable men and women in uniform who make sacrifices on our behalf every single day.

"But the second reason is that we've had the biggest economy in the world that can support this incredible armed force that we have. And if we start falling behind economically, we will start falling behind from a national security perspective — there's no doubt about it. And the single-most important determinant of how we do economically is going to be the skills of our workforce. And you're exactly right. We used to be at the top of the heap when it came to math and science education; we are now 21st and 25th, respectively, in science and math. We used to be No. 1 in the proportion of college graduates in the world. We're now ranked around ninth. Other countries are making huge investments.

"China is doubling, tripling, quadrupling the number of college graduates it is generating. It is putting huge resources into it, because they understand that unless they want to build low-wage manufacturing plants for the duration of the 21st century, they've got to start moving up the value chain in the economy. They've got to start producing more engineers and scientists. India understands that. Germany has long understood that. And yet, here we are, losing that first-place position. That is unacceptable. So here's the thing. We know what works. There are kids out there who are doing great, even from the most disadvantaged backgrounds in the poorest neighborhoods, still producing outstanding results."

Obama went on to the need for "great teachers" and measured progress. The more he got into his education spiel, the further he got from the proposition he'd embraced: In a world made small by its global economy, education must now be a national security priority.

Hopefully, Obama will soon announce that his excellent Education Secretary Arne Duncan will be staying for another four years.

Duncan is not one who seeks to solve our education problems by just throwing money at them. But he knows the security of our coming generations depends upon us spending wisely, and sufficiently, now.

As Official Washington is just weeks away from another of its self-inflicted deadline crises about the debt ceiling and budget cutting, we must never again forget the reality that earnest young questioner brought to the president's attention, and ours, two years ago.

Grain elevator blew its top, killing three men in January 1988

The sun was going down Jan. 15, 1988, when a dust explosion blew the top off the Ellis Grain Co. elevator on Fifth Street, killing three men and injuring two others.

It was one of the most powerful explosions — if not the biggest — Henderson has ever experienced. Chunks of concrete weighing 100 pounds were tossed 75 yards or more, and large steel girders were “curled around like a noodle,” according to Engineer Jerry Spencer, the first firefighter to reach the scene.

The 10-inch-thick, steel-reinforced concrete shell around the top 110 feet of the 207-foot-tall elevator was blasted to fragments.

It took a long time for the dust to settle.

It also took a long time for the rescue to be completed. The Henderson Fire Department was on the scene within minutes, but Richard Thomas, who had been working high up in the elevator when it tore itself apart, was stranded 120 feet off the ground with a pelvis broken in five places and third-degree burns over 30 percent of his body.

Firefighters bravely worked their way up the crumbling structure to him. Assistant Chief Larry Henshaw comforted Thomas and covered him with his coat as night fell and rescuers tried to figure out how to get him down. Dressed only in his shirt-sleeves, Henshaw worked for two hours in 35-degree weather.

The fire department's aerial ladder truck reached only 85 feet high, while a truck brought in from Evansville was only 100 feet tall. Hazex Construction Co. came to the rescue with a crane that was being used to demolish the old J.J. Newberry building downtown, but even it was 10 feet short of Thomas, although that was high enough that firefighters could reach the rescue basket it lifted.

After three and one-half hours a precarious high-angle rescue finally got Thomas, 33, back on the ground, where he spent 25 days in the hospital and nearly nine months convalescing.

Joseph E. Yates, 38, was the other survivor; he was taken to the hospital by private vehicle almost immediately after the blast, where he initially was listed in critical condition with facial and hand burns.

Two the fatalities — Gary A. Gross, 28, and John Hughes, 40 — had been working on the same level as Thomas, but their bodies were found on the ground. The other victim was Thomas A. Kortz, 24, who, like Yates, had been working at the base of the south headhouse.

Coroner Don Cantley said the men were probably killed almost instantaneously by the concussion of the explosion; if nothing else, they were certainly unconscious by the time they were buried under fallen concrete.

A plaque in the elevator's office said the facility had gone 11 years without a lost-time accident, but the fallout of the blast raised multiple concerns about the elevator, which dated from 1955.

A joint investigation by the state Fire Marshal's Office and the Henderson Fire Department released its findings April 4; investigators had quickly ruled out human error, and almost nearly as quickly surmised that it was multiple explosions.

The final conclusion was that a flash fire ignited by an overheated bearing had started in the north headhouse, raced through connections to the south headhouse, where it sparked a second explosion that in turn stirred up a massive cloud of dust for the final cataclysmic explosion in the enclosed space at the top of the south headhouse.

Separate investigations were done by insurance investigators and the Richard Thomas calls for help after the Ellis Grain Co. elevator explosion. Thomas somehow survived the blast but was stranded 120 feet in the air. He was finally rescued three and one-half hours later with the help of a borrowed crane, but spent 25 days hospitalized and nearly nine months convalescing.

state Occupational Safety and Health Compliance Division, but they drew the same conclusions. The state agency issued two “serious” citations to the company in the summer of 1988.

The explosion drew regional and national attention, not only for its deadly force, but also because it had come on the heels of newly enacted federal safety regulations. It played a prominent role in congressional hearings about those regulations.

A year after the blast a hearing was scheduled in Owensboro because the firm was fighting the $980 fine the state had levied, but it was canceled after the state agreed to a settlement in which the firm paid a fine of $490 although not admitting any liability.

Demolition began in mid-March of 1988. The grain firm spent nearly two years razing the two headhouses, which contained the machinery for moving grain, and installing exterior equipment to fill the bins, which were repaired and retained. The end result was a facility that could contain 700,000 bushels instead of its original capacity of about 1 million bushels.

The elevator once again began accepting grain Sept. 26, 1989. But neither of the two survivors of the blast were there. Thomas became a truck driver before returning to work for Owensboro Grain Co. — the parent firm of Ellis Grain — in 1991, where he still works in Owensboro. Yates continued to work for awhile for Ellis Grain, but at the elevator near Geneva.

“I’ve still got scars on my hands, but it hasn’t made a big change in my life,” Yates said in a story published exactly a year after the explosion. “I’ll never forget the pain and the guys who got killed. But you take one day at a time and you get on with your life.”

100 YEARS AGO

Court officials declined to take action against the Rev. Eugene Remole of Mount Pleasant Baptist Church for selling soft drinks without a license during a church picnic because it was clear he had been doing it to benefit the church, The Gleaner reported Jan. 10, 1913.

Two other men unaffiliated with the church were not so lucky and were fined $25 each.

75 YEARS AGO

The L&N Railroad honored L.W. Rogers after he had spent nearly 39 years in the company's service, The Gleaner reported Jan. 16, 1938.

Rogers had been ticket agent here since 1900, when construction had just begun on Union Station, which opened in 1902. At that time the L&N station was where the old L&N freight warehouse is currently located, between Adams and Alves streets.

There were also two other railroad stations in town back in 1900: The Illinois Central was on Second Street, also between Adams and Alves, and the Louisville, Henderson & St. Louis (often called the Texas) was at Third and Alvasia streets.

50 YEARS AGO

A plan by the state Department of Commerce for the re-use of Camp Breckinridge met with general approval from local officials interested in the topic, The Gleaner reported Jan. 12, 1963.

The plan called for 25,000 acres to be used for agriculture, about 5,000 acres to be used for industrial development, mostly along U.S. 60, and another 5,000 acres be set aside for hunting and wildlife habitat. The question of whether the coal and oil rights should be sold separately was left unresolved. No mention was made of returning the land to the farmers who originally owned it prior to World War II.

Today in history

Today is Sunday, Jan. 13, the 13th day of 2013. There are 352 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Jan. 13, 2012, the Italian luxury liner Costa Concordia ran aground off the Tuscan island of Giglio and flipped onto its side; 32 people were killed. (Ship's captain Francesco Schettino faces possible trial on charges of manslaughter and abandoning ship before evacuation was complete.)

On this date:

In 1733, James Oglethorpe and some 120 English colonists arrived at Charleston, S.C., while en route to settle in present-day Georgia.

In 1794, President George Washington approved a measure adding two stars and two stripes to the American flag, following the admission of Vermont and Kentucky to the Union. (The number of stripes was later reduced to the original 13.)

In 1864, composer Stephen Foster died in a New York hospital at age 37. (In his pocket: a note which read, “Dear friends and gentle hearts.”)

In 1945, during World War II, Soviet forces began a huge, successful offensive against the Germans in Eastern Europe.

In 1966, Robert C.

Weaver was named secretary of Housing and Urban Development by President Lyndon B. Johnson; Weaver became the first black Cabinet member.

In 1978, former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey died in Waverly, Minn., at age 66.

In 1982, an Air Florida 737 crashed into Washington, D.C.'s 14th Street Bridge and fell into the Potomac River after taking off during a snowstorm, killing 78 people; four passengers and a flight attendant survived.

In 1987, West German police arrested Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a suspect in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner. (Although convicted and sentenced to life, Hamadi was paroled by Germany in December 2005; he is on the FBI's Most Wanted Terrorists list.)

In 1990, L. Douglas Wilder of Virginia became the nation's first elected black governor as he took the oath of office in Richmond.

In 1992, Japan apologized for forcing tens of thousands of Korean women to serve as sex slaves for its soldiers during World War II, citing newly uncovered documents that showed the Japanese army had had a role in abducting the so-called “comfort women.”

Ten years ago: Connecticut Sen. Joseph Lieberman jumped into the 2004 race for president. Rock musician

Pete Townshend was arrested in London on suspicion of possessing indecent images of children. (Townshend said he was only doing research for an autobiography dealing with his own suspected childhood sexual abuse; he was eventually cleared of possessing pornographic images of children.) The owners of FAO Schwarz filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection. (FAO Inc. emerged from bankruptcy in April 2003, but filed again for bankruptcy in December 2003.)

authoritarian Arab allies to satisfy frustrated desires for democracy in the Mideast and saved his harshest criticism for Iran, branding it “the world's leading state-sponsor of terror.”

One year ago: A Peruvian court sentenced Joran van der Sloot to 28 years in prison for murdering Stephany Flores, a young woman he'd met at a Lima casino. Myanmar freed some of its most famous political prisoners, sparking jubilation among their supporters. Veteran TV newsmen Richard Threlkeld, 74, was killed in a car crash on New York's Long Island.

Reddit co-founder Swartz, 26, kills self

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A co-founder of Reddit and activist who fought to make online content free to the public has been found dead, authorities confirmed Saturday, prompting an outpouring of grief from prominent voices on the intersection of free speech and the Web.

Aaron Swartz, 26, hanged himself in his Brooklyn apartment weeks before he was to go on trial on accusations he stole millions of journal articles from an electronic archive in an attempt to make them freely available. If convicted, he faced decades in prison and a fortune in fines.

He was pronounced dead Friday evening at home in Brooklyn's Crown Heights neighborhood, said a spokeswoman for New York's chief medical examiner.

Swartz was "an extraordinary hacker and activist," the Electronic Frontier Foundation, an international nonprofit digital rights group based in California wrote in a tribute on its home page.

He "did more than almost anyone to make the Internet a thriving ecosystem for open knowledge, and to keep it that way," the tribute said.

Swartz was a prodigy who as a teenager helped create RSS, a family of Web feed formats used to gather updates from blogs, news headlines, audio and video. He cofounded the social news website Reddit and the group Demand Progress, which fights Internet censorship.

Family saga hits spotlight in lottery winner's death

Chicago man was poisoned with cyanide

By Jason Keyser
Associated Press

CHICAGO — In the week since news surfaced a Chicago man was poisoned to death with cyanide just before he was to collect a lottery payout, surprising details about his convoluted family saga have trickled out daily.

Urooj Khan's widow and siblings fought for months over the businessman's estate, including the lottery check. His father-in-law owed tens of thousands of dollars in taxes.

His 17-year-old daughter from a previous marriage had moved out of her stepmom's home and into his sister's after his death. Then his ex-wife came forward, announcing in anguish she hadn't seen her daughter in more than a decade and hadn't even known she was still in the U.S.

The slowly emerging family back story and ever-expanding cast of characters have added layers of intrigue to a baffling case in which authorities have revealed little and everyone is wondering: Who did it?

The victim's relatives hint at family squabbles. And Khan's wife, Shabana Ansari, has endured clutches of reporters outside the family home and business, asking even whether it was a lamb or beef curry dinner she made for Khan on the night he died.

"She's just as curious as anyone else to get to the bottom of what caused her husband's death," said Al-Haroon Husain, who is representing Ansari in the case that will divide up Khan's estate, including the $425,000 in lottery winnings.

Ansari and other relatives have denied any role in his death and expressed a desire to learn the truth.

Authorities remain tight-lipped about who they may suspect. In the coming weeks, they plan to exhume the 46-year-old Indian immigrant's body, which might allow investigators to determine exactly how he was poisoned and to gather more evidence for any possible trial.

Khan seemed to be living the American dream. He had come to the U.S. from his home in Hyderabad, India, in 1989, setting up several dry-cleaning businesses and buying into some real-estate investments.

Treasury: $1 trillion coin likely illegal

WASHINGTON — Forget about the government minting a $1 trillion coin to solve its debt-limit crisis.

Treasury Department spokesman Anthony Coley said Saturday neither his department nor the Federal Reserve believes the law can or should be used to produce such a coin to avoid a coming battle with Congress over government borrowing.

Some of President Barack Obama's liberal allies have been promoting the coin strategy.

The government has reached its $16.4 trillion borrowing limit. By late February or early March, Treasury will run out of ways to cover debts and could begin defaulting on government loans.

White House spokesman Jay Carney says Congress has two options at its disposal: either pay the tab for its spending or send the nation into default, which would have serious economic consequences.

Delta Sigma Theta celebrates 100 years

WASHINGTON — The nation's capital is swarming with women wearing crimson and cream, as one of the country's largest African-American sororities gathers to celebrate 100 years of sisterhood.

More than 12,000 members of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority Inc. are convening to mark the organization's centennial this weekend with activities including community service, a rededication and an awards ceremony.

"We want people to understand that we are still called to serve," said Gwendolyn Boyd, chair of the sorority's centennial events.

Members from across the country participated in 22 projects throughout the District of Columbia on Friday in honor of their 22 founders.

They will hold a rededication luncheon and gala on Saturday that will be emceed by actors Tim Reid and Daphne Maxwell Reid.

The gala will honor members, organizations and individuals who represent the sorority's mantra, including the Rev. Jesse Jackson; Johnetta B. Cole, the director of the National Museum of African Art; comedian Bill Cosby and his wife, Camille; former U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young; syndicated radio host Tom Joyner; and U.S. Surgeon General Regina Benjamin.

The festivities culminate on Sunday, the sorority's actual centennial.

CALIFORNIA

Early freezes will shock state senses

SAN DIEGO — Californians are bundling up with sweaters and gloves and stocking up on firewood as they endure the latest winter storm that has brought very unseasonable freezing temperatures.

The National Weather Service said records could fall as the cold snap stretches into the weekend.

"It's only going to get colder," NWS weather specialist Bonnie Bartling said. "Early Sunday, you're looking at possibly mid-30s in downtown Los Angeles." Long Beach could see temps dip into the low 30s, she said.

Freeze warnings were issued for Sunday morning across wide swaths of the L.A. Basin and San Diego County. Residents were being urged to cover outdoor plants and bring pets inside.

SYRIA

Syrian troops secure strategic suburb

DAMASCUS — Syrian troops advanced in a strategic suburb of Damascus and bombarded other areas around the capital Saturday in a push to secure President Bashar Assad's seat of power as rebels make gains in the north.

A government official said regime forces had taken much of Daraya, an area on the edge of a major military air base just south of the capital, after nearly two months of heavy fighting anti-regime activists say has killed dozens of people and uprooted tens of thousands more from their homes.

The announcement came a day after rebels and Islamic militants seeking to topple Assad took full control of the northwestern Taftanaz air base in a significant blow to the military.

ISRAEL

Roads blocked to Palestinian tent site

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu closed roads leading to a strategic West Bank site Saturday night in preparation to evacuate Palestinians who pitched tents there to protest plans to build a Jewish housing project.

Palestinian activists erected tents in the area known as E-1 on Friday saying they want to establish a village there.

Netanyahu's office said Saturday night that the state is petitioning the Supreme Court to rescind an earlier injunction blocking the evacuation. In the meantime, he ordered the area declared a closed military zone and shut off access.

EGYPT

Protesters, security forces hit by birdshot

CAIRO — A dozen masked attackers fired birdshot late Saturday at protesters who have camped outside Egypt's presidential palace in Cairo for the past month, wounding several along with security forces standing watch nearby, witnesses said. It was the latest in a series of shootings of protesters in Egypt.

Paramedic Mohammed Sultan put the total number of wounded in the attack at 15, including nine members of the security forces and six protesters.

Newspaper's gifts to Mubarak questioned

CAIRO — An Egyptian prosecutor placed a new detention order on Hosni Mubarak on Saturday after the ousted ex-president was questioned over valuable gifts he allegedly received from the country's top newspaper as a show of loyalty while he was in power, a security official said.

The public funds prosecutor ordered Mubarak to be held for 15 days pending investigation, the official said. The former president already is serving a life sentence after being convicted of failing to stop killings of protesters during the 2011 uprising that overthrew him. But he is scheduled to hear a ruling on his appeal today, and the detention order could prevent him from walking free pending retrial were the appellate court to rule in his favor.

The security official said Mubarak was questioned over an estimated $1 million worth of watches, pens, bags, belts and jewelry he reportedly received from the official Al-Ahram newspaper.

A man identified as French security agent Denis Alex pleads for his release, in a 2010 video posted on an Islamic militant website, from the Somali militant group al-Shabaab who have been holding him for nearly a year.

Raid to free French hostage in Somalia results in chaos

By Jamey Keaten and Abdi Gued
Associated Press

MOGADISHU, Somalia — A raid to free a French intelligence agent held captive in Somalia for three years went horribly wrong, leaving 17 Islamists and at least one French commando dead in a mud-caked farming town deep in militant territory.

In the chaotic aftermath of the firefight, the hostage's fate was unclear Saturday. The Islamists denied French claims he was killed and said they had a new prisoner — a wounded French soldier.

The botched rescue in East Africa came the same day French airstrikes in the West African nation of Mali targeted resurgent rebel Islamists. French officials said the two operations were unrelated, but stepped up domestic counterterrorism measures to protect public places and transportation networks.

Confusion surrounded early reports of the failed rescue of the French agent, known by his code-name Denis Alex. He was captured in Somalia on July 14, 2009 — Bastille Day — and last seen in a video released in October pleading for the French president to help him.

But it was clear a dangerous raid the French defense minister said was planned with the utmost of care had encountered serious problems from the moment the helicopters swooped in.

"This operation could not be achieved despite the sacrifice of two of our soldiers and doubtless the murder of our hostage," French President Francois Hollande said in a grim nationwide broadcast.

French Defense Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian said Alex was killed by his captors and one French soldier was missing and one dead, along with 17 Islamists. The Defense Ministry earlier said two commandos were killed in the fighting in the Somali town of Bulomarer, a small farming community under Islamist control for four years.

"It was an extremely dangerous mission," Le Drian said. "Everything indicates Denis Alex was killed."

The militant Islamist group al-Shabab, which held Alex for more than three years, said Saturday he remained alive and in its custody, as was a new captive — a French commando wounded in fighting. There are also seven French hostages in Mali.

Offensive on militants heats up in Mali

By Rukmini Callimachi and Baba Ahmed
Associated Press

BAMAKO, Mali — The battle to retake Mali's north from the al-Qaida-linked groups controlling it began in earnest Saturday, after hundreds of French forces deployed to the country and began aerial bombardments to drive back the Islamic extremists.

At the same time, nations in West Africa authorized the immediate deployment of troops to Mali, fast-forwarding a military intervention that was not due to start until September.

The decision to begin the military operation was taken after the fighters, who seized the northern half of Mali nine months ago, decided earlier this week to push even farther south to the town of Konna, coming within 30 miles of Mopti, the first town held by the government and a major base for the Malian military.

Many believe if Mopti were to fall, the Islamists potentially could seize the rest of the country, dramatically raising the stakes.

The potential outcome was "a terrorist state at the doorstep of France and Europe," French Defense Minister Jean-Yves Le Drian said.

France scrambled Mirage fighter jets from a base in neighboring Chad, as well as combat helicopters beginning the aerial assault on Friday.

It also has sent in hundreds of troops to the front line, as well as to secure the capital.

'Promised Land' doesn't dig deep enough

By Christy Lemire

Review

"Promised Land" offers an experience that's alternately amusing and frustrating, full of impassioned earnestness as well as saggy sections.

Director Gus Van Sant has the challenging task of taking the divisive, high-tech practice of fracking and trying to make it not just human but cinematic. Working from a script by co-stars Matt Damon and John Krasinski, based on a story by Dave Eggers, he succeeds in fits and starts.

The impoverished small town that's the tale's setting, a place in need of the kind of economic rejuvenation that extracting natural gas could provide, is full of folksy folks whose interactions with the main characters don't always ring true. "Promised Land" has its heart on its sleeve and its pro-environment message is quite clear, but it's in the looser and more ambiguous places that the film actually works.

Damon, collaborating with Van Sant for the third time as both screenwriter and actor (following "Gerry" and the Oscar-winning "Good Will Hunting"), stars as Steve Butler, a salesman traveling the country on behalf of a bland behemoth of an energy corporation.

Having grown up on an Iowa farm himself and seen how an economic downturn can devastate a small town, Steve is a likable everyman who seems genuinely invested in what he's selling. But he's also a pragmatist, as evidenced by the playfully cynical give-and-take he enjoys with his partner, Sue, played by a dry, sharp Frances McDormand.

Famously for his efficiency in persuading rural residents to sell their land for the drilling rights, Steve runs into an unprecedented challenge when he and Sue arrive in the depressed dairy farming community of McKinley in western Pennsylvania. Outspoken old-timer Frank (Hal Holbrook), the high school science teacher, and flashy, charismatic environmental crusader Dustin (Krasinski) dare to question the company's methods in increasingly vocal ways.

But even as Steve struggles to close the deal, he finds himself growing entrenched in the daily rhythms of this idyllically charming little nook of the heartland. Rosemarie DeWitt co-stars as a winsome grade school teacher with disarmingly half-baked romantic connections to both Steve and Dustin; essentially, it's as if she's waiting around the local watering hole on karaoke night, hoping that some cute, exciting outsider will waltz in and woo her. The actress, and the character, deserve better. Similarly, Sue enjoys a brief flirtation with the sarcastic convenience store owner (Titus Welliver) whose character is underdeveloped and yet so briefly intriguing, you'd like to know more about him. All of this feels half-heartedly wedged-in.

Steve and Dustin obviously function as two sides of the same coin, but their confrontations don't crackle the way they should because everyone involved is just so darn nice. But there is an appealing gray area suggested in Damon's character. For a while, we're not quite sure whether he's a true believer or an opportunistic climber — that is, until some major and implausible plot twists make his stance forcefully, indisputably clear.

"Promised Land," a Focus Features release, is rated R for language. Running time: 106 minutes. Two stars out of four.

I've Lost Over 100 lbs.!!

Shannon AFTER

It took more than 15 years for the term "obese" to show up on my medical record. When I first read it I was shocked. I knew I had gained weight, but I was NOT obese. I left the doctors office feeling shocked and hurt.

Fast forward a few months later and I had to go on blood pressure medicine. I was only 33. Fast-forward another month, my family and I were at a theme park and my oldest daughter couldn't wait to ride a roller coaster for the first time with me. I couldn't fit in the seat and she had to ride by herself. I was mortified and heartbroken. What happened to me?

I analyzed my life. I was happily married with 3 kids. I was happy with my life. So happy that I became content with my body and didn't really think about the weight gain. My breakfast was a 44 oz. Mt. Dew and a bag of chips. It was easy, yummy and the caffeine helped me keep up with the day. However, I started to see that I was setting a bad example for my kids and I was growing more exhausted and worn out. Something had to be done.

Shannon BEFORE

My mom and I joined The Perfect Plan together. I realized after just a few short weeks that it was something I could do for life. Losing weight is not easy, but this plan works for me. The accountability is huge. The nutritional education is so beneficial. The staff helped me realize that food is not just something to curb your hunger, not just a reward or celebration, or something to sink your sorrows into. Food is simply the fuel to keep your body healthy.

Now, after losing over 100 pounds, I look at my "before" picture and realize that I really was obese. I'm embarrassed that I let myself gain so much weight, but I'm a better person for losing it. And the best part is that I can ride any roller coaster I want! I owe the staff at The Perfect Plan more than I can ever give for teaching me the basics of weight loss success and I'll be with them for life!

Jefferson Elementary activities planned

Gleaner staff

Jefferson Elementary School students will be busy little bees this month.

The school's students are participating in Pennies for Patients, a campaign designed to bring awareness about the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

Throughout January, students will be collecting change and saving it in their piggy banks for the nonprofit, according to a news release from Henderson County Schools. The fundraising also helps teach students the importance of service learning projects.

Students and staff will be wearing a sports shirt for 50 cents during "Team Up Against Leukemia Day," on Friday and will wear a hat to school for 50 cents during "Hats on for Patients Day" on Jan. 25.

The school has set a goal of $350 to donate to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society from the service learning project. For more information, contact Jefferson Elementary guidance counselor Jamie Lawalin at 831-5090.

The school will also host a Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics Family Fun Night from 5 to 7 p.m. Jan. 31.

The gymnasium will be filled with fun participation stations for students and families to visit. There will be an emphasis on STEM concepts.

Free dinner will be provided for the families participating in the science activities.

A telescope activity will be conducted, weather permitting. A science-magic show will be held if the weather is cloudy. There are also several other educational activities planned for throughout the night.

The project was coordinated by Jefferson Elementary Commonwealth Institute for Parent Leadership team in cooperation with the school's principals and teachers.

For more information, call Leslie Abbott, CIPL team member and Parent Teacher Organization parent, at leslie.abbott@insightbb.com.

Library to sponsor black history event

Gleaner staff

Black History Month programming at Henderson County Public Library will kick off on Feb. 2 with a program called "Meet John Henry," and registration begins today.

The educational program at 1:30 p.m. that Saturday afternoon at the Presbyterian Church of Henderson, located across the street from the library at 100 S. Main St., will offer a portrayal of the legendary "steel driving man" John Henry by Storytellers Drum of Indianapolis.

Railroad worker John Henry was a former slave who worked for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad helping to build the Great Bend Tunnel.

The tunnel went through the Big Bend Mountains and took 1,000 men and boys three years to finish, and John Henry's strength and work ethic were legendary.

Immediately following the performance, a Southern-style meal with a taste of soul will be served.

Registration starts today at www.hcpl.org or by calling the library at 826-3712.

Hospitals get tough on health workers' flu shots

■ Some employees lose jobs for not getting vaccine

By Lindsey Tanner
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Patients can refuse a flu shot. Should doctors and nurses have that right, too? That is the thorny question facing as U.S. hospitals increasingly crack down on employees who won't get flu shots, with some workers losing their jobs over their refusal.

"Where does it say that I am no longer a patient if I'm a nurse," wondered Carrie Calhoun, a long-time critical care nurse in suburban Chicago who was fired last month after she refused a flu shot.

Hospitals' get-tougher measures coincide with an earlier-than-usual flu season hitting harder than in recent mild seasons. Flu is widespread in most states, and at least 20 children have died.

Most doctors and nurses do get flu shots. But in the past two months, at least 15 nurses and other hospital staffers in four states have been fired for refusing, and several others have resigned, according to affected workers, hospital authorities and published reports.

In Rhode Island, one of three states with tough penalties behind a mandatory vaccine policy for health care workers, more than 1,000 workers recently signed a petition opposing the policy, according to a labor union that has filed suit to end the regulation.

Why would people whose job is to protect sick patients refuse a flu shot? The reasons vary: allergies to flu vaccine, which are rare; religious objections; and skepticism about whether vaccinating health workers will prevent flu in patients.

Dr. Carolyn Bridges, associate director for adult immunization at the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, says the strongest evidence is from studies in nursing homes, linking flu vaccination among health care workers with fewer patient deaths from all causes.

"We would all like to see stronger data," she said. But other evidence shows flu vaccination "significantly decreases" flu cases, she said. "It should work the same in a health care worker versus somebody out in the community."

Cancer nurse Joyce Gingerich is among the skeptics and says her decision to avoid the shot is mostly "a personal thing." She's among seven employees at IU Health Goshen Hospital in northern Indiana who were recently fired for refusing flu shots. Gingerich said she gets other vaccinations but thinks it should be a choice. She opposes "the injustice of being forced to put something in my body."

ETHICAL OBLIGATION

Medical ethicist Art Caplan says health care workers' ethical obligation to protect patients trumps their individual rights.

"If you don't want to do it, you shouldn't work in that environment," said Caplan, medical ethics chief at New York University's Langone Medical Center. "Patients should demand that their health care provider gets flu shots — and they should ask them."

For some people, flu causes only mild symptoms. But it also can lead to pneumonia, and there are thousands of hospitalizations and deaths each year. The number of deaths has varied in recent decades from about 3,000 to 49,000.

award $15,000. The organization receiving the most votes will receive $10,000. The first and second runners-up will receive $2,500 each, POW members said.

All POW efforts and finances are reported to the board of the Community Foundation of Henderson, Banna-Pritchett said.

After the group of founding members decided to jump in and get started, she said, life didn't slow down.

"We are still very busy," she said.

"But everybody is busy," Preston said.

"We want this to be a lot of fun for women and not a lot of work," Banna-Pritchett said. "We'll have fun activities and gather as women to talk and dream and have some fun."

"It's about committing as much time as you want to commit ...," Preston said. "You determine your level of involvement and you still can make an impact on your community."

"Everybody wants to be part of something good," Keach said.

"It's been a dream of ours for a long, long time and it will be a rich blessing for many years," Banna-Pritchett said.

Those who can't attend Tuesday's event can go to cfhenderson.org for more information. Women with questions also can contact members through the group's Facebook page.

With a high of 35 Monday and most sunny skies, the ice should melt quickly, he said.

The meteorologist asks motorists to use extra caution Monday morning, as there more than likely still will be ice in the area on bridges and overpasses.

As of Saturday afternoon, Evansville Regional Airport reported 1.4 inches of rainfall so far this year, Smith said.

long "Living Healthy" program at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at Methodist Hospital in Henderson.

The session, which is the third in the hospital's new Living Healthy series that has no designated end, features local psychologist Libby Bethel, who will — in her laid-back, informal style — talk about the life changes implied in New Year's resolutions and why we shouldn't fear them, or fear change in general.

"Change happens," said Libby, an Oklahoma native who moved here after college, spent some years away at Frazier Rehabilitation Hospital in Louisville and Northwestern Univer-

SOME THINGS TO KNOW ABOUT FLU SEASON

THE SITUATION: The annual flu season hit about a month early this year, and illness now is widespread in 47 states. Many cases are caused by a flu strain that tends to make people sicker. But so far experts say it's too early to know whether this will end up being a bad season. Maybe not: There are signs the flu may have already peaked in a few states, though it's too early to tell for sure, health officials say.

THE VACCINE: This season's vaccine is well matched to the circulating strains, and there's still some available. It is 62 percent effective, according to government study results released Friday, which is pretty good for a flu vaccine. Health officials are urging people to get vaccinated; it's recommended for everyone 6 months or older.

THE DEFENSE: Besides getting a flu shot, wash hands with soap and warm water, and avoid touching your eyes, nose and mouth. Keep away from sick people.

THE TREATMENT: Most people will get a mild case and can help themselves and protect others by staying home and resting. But people with severe symptoms should see a doctor. They might be given antiviral drugs or other medications to ease symptoms.

COLD OR FLU?: Influenza is not the only bug making people sick. The cold virus and a nasty stomach virus also are going around. It can sometimes be hard to tell the difference, but cold symptoms include stuffy or runny nose, sore throat and sneezing. Flu usually involves fever, along with chills, headache and moderate-to-severe body aches and tiredness. Symptoms can come on rapidly, within three to six hours.

A survey by CDC researchers found that in 2011, more than 400 U.S. hospitals required flu vaccinations for their employees and 29 hospitals fired unvaccinated employees.

At Calhoun's hospital, Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village, Ill., unvaccinated workers granted exemptions must wear masks and tell patients, "I'm wearing the mask for your safety," Calhoun says. She says that's discriminatory and might make patients want to avoid "the dirty nurse" with the mask.

The hospital justified its vaccination policy in an email, citing the CDC's warning this year's flu outbreak was "expected to be among the worst in a decade" and noted Illinois already has been hit especially hard. The mandatory vaccine policy "is consistent with our health system's mission to provide the safest environment possible."

The government recommends flu shots for nearly everyone, starting at age 6 months.

Vaccination rates among the general public are generally lower than among health care workers.

According to the most recent federal data, about 63 percent of U.S. health care workers had flu shots as of November. That's up from previous years, but the government wants 90 percent coverage of health care workers by 2020.

The highest rate, about 88 percent, was among pharmacists, followed by doctors at 84 percent, and nurses, 82 percent. Fewer than half of nursing assistants and aides are vaccinated, Bridges said.

Some hospitals have achieved 90 percent but many fall short. A government health advisory panel has urged those below 90 percent to consider a mandatory program.

tion for "sale of sewer services, water and fuel to Kentucky residents for use in heating, water heating, cooking, lighting and other residential uses."

Corydon has only a handful of commercial sewer customers, Brewster said, and they would not be eligible for a sales tax refund.

Brewster said the matter came to light when a customer, who declined to be identified, brought the matter to the city's attention, and the sales tax charge was removed from the city sewer bills as of the December billing.

"I'm glad he brought it to our attention," he said. "If we're doing something wrong, I want to fix it and make it right."

"It's a problem I inherited. It's been like that since the sewer system was brought to Corydon. We have been made aware of the situation and have corrected the situation. It's no longer on the sewer bills."

women (or more) to give $500 annually. In November, we will have a fabulous dinner and hear the top qualifiers (nonprofit agencies) who need the money. Then you vote on where your head and heart leads you."

However, the women said those interested in joining shouldn't let the $500 scare them. Women can be members of POW without donating $500. That amount ensures one vote toward how the funding will be dispersed.

"Five hundred dollars equals one vote and you can donate through installments," according to POW information. "You can also, together with a friend, pitch in $250. Then at the dinner, the two of you decide where you want your money to go, as one vote. Multiple people can comprise $500 and equate to one vote (20 at $25 each, 10 at $50 each, five at $100 each, etc.) Also, if you want to give $1,000, you can have two votes, and so on."

"We want to see immediate results for the community, but we're also thinking of the future," Preston said.

Therefore, she said, POW will establish two endowments: the first will be given in 2013 and the second will be held in a fund for a future endeavor.

Obama returned to the White House after spending just less than two hours at the Pentagon.

Turner, A&M sink Wildcats

■ Aggies star pours in 40 as UK falls 83-71

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Looking back, Texas A&M's Elston Turner said preseason runs through 110-degree heat were the foundation of preparing the Aggies for their first pass at playing in the Southeastern Conference.

The summer heat in eastern Texas couldn't match Turner's shooting hand Saturday against Kentucky.

Turner dropped 40 points at Rupp Arena, easily topping his previous career high, and the Aggies won their first league road game as SEC members 83-71.

The loss was John Calipari's first home conference loss since becoming the Wildcats' head coach before the 2009-10 season. He's 24-1 at home in SEC games as Kentucky's coach.

Turner finished 14 of 19 from the floor, including 6 of 10 from 3-point range. He said he got a good feel for the Rupp Arena rims

JAMES CRISP/ASSOCIATED PRESS

during shoot-around, and he wasn't intimidated by the 24,193 fans in attendance who, at one point in the second half, grew so loud that the referee's whistle to indicate a timeout was almost inaudible at court level.

Turner's father, also named Elston Turner, played a handful of games at Rupp Arena as a guard for Mississippi from 1977-81.

"He said it was loud, and it's going to be at least 20,000 people there," Turner said of speaking to his father. "I haven't talked to him in the past couple of days, but I'm sure he's calling me right now."

Calipari stuck struggling freshman Alex Poythress with defending Turner from the opening tip, and Turner struck right away. He scored nine points in the first six minutes, and Calipari spent the rest of the game throwing different matchups and a variety of defensive schemes at Turner.

"It was a mistake," Calipari said of putting Poythress on Turner.

Turner dominated the first half, scoring 25 before the break — his previous career high for a single game was 26 — and sending the Aggies into the locker room with a 36-31 lead.

Kentucky's Archie Goodwin was largely responsible for Turner's slow start to the second half. Goodwin bodied him up, guarding him aggressively away from the ball to limit catch-and-shoot opportunities that piled up in the first half. When Turner hit his first field goal of the second half with 9:34 to play, it broke a 51-51 tie.

Kentucky took the lead twice over the next five minutes, and both times Turner turned around with a 3-pointer.

"It took a 40-point game to beat Kentucky at Kentucky," Texas A&M coach Billy Kennedy said. "The run that they have in the SEC, winning all these home games, it's for a reason. They're very good, they're very deep, very talented and very well coached. But for us to score 83 against their defense was incredible, and it took a special performance."

The Wildcats last tied the game with 4:33 to play on a Goodwin free throw. But the Aggies then scored 11 straight points, blowing open a game that had been within five points for either team since about three minutes into the second half.

Kentucky freshman Nerlens Noel finished with 15 points, 11 rebounds, seven blocks, six assists and four steals Saturday.

"I just tried to play hard tonight, as hard as I could for my team, to give us the best chance of winning and came up a little short," Noel said. "Us as players, we've got to take that responsibility and just really get back to it."

Colonels' road warrior schedule to wind down

Henderson County's road warrior schedule is about to wind down but not before three away games this week.

The Colonels make two trips to Owensboro this week, visiting Daviess County Tuesday and Apollo on Thursday before playing at Second Region rival Madisonville on Saturday.

Following the Jan. 26 game with Collins at Shelby County, Henderson County will have played 18 of its first 21 games away from Colonel Gym. It will be Home Sweet Home for the Colonels the rest of the way with six of their last seven games in the friendly confines of Colonel Gym.

With the Colonels at home for most of the final month of the season, that means the Lady Colonels will be on the bus frequently.

Beginning with Saturday's game at Marshall County, Henderson County's girls will play eight of their last nine games away from home.

A couple of games to note in that stretch include the Feb. 9 meeting with top-ranked Marion County and its pair of UK signees Makayla Epps and Kyvin Goodin-Rogers in the Valentine's Shootout at East Hardin Middle School as well as the Feb. 11 trip to Owensboro Catholic which features another Miss Basketball candidate, Duke signee Becca Greenwell.

ALL-A CLASSIC

Webster County's basketball teams will be competing in the All-A Classic regional tournaments this week.

The first-round games will be played at various sites with the semifinals and finals being played Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Crittenden County.

Webster County's girls, who are a solid favorite to win their sixth All-A regional title, open the regional Monday at home against Trigg County.

Webster's boys, who will look to defend their All-A title, travel to Trigg County on Tuesday for their first-round game. The boys tournament looks to be up for grabs with Webster (10-7), Lyon County (9-6), Crittenden County (9-8) and Trigg County (8-5) with the best chance to emerge from the eight-team field.

The All-A state tournaments will be Jan. 23-27 in Frankfort.

NORMAN HONORED BY JOHN A. LOGAN

Henderson native Brian Norman will be inducted into the John A. Logan Sports Hall of Fame on March 2.

Norman still holds the school record for lowest average round (72.3) in school history.

That came in his sophomore year when he was ranked No. 1 in the nation and named a JUCO All-American.

Norman, who later played at Southern Illinois, is now assistant golf professional at the Lakes at Castle Hills in Lewisville, Texas.

Running its winning streak to eight games, Henderson County has found it can win in different ways.

The 15-2 Colonels claimed a defense-oriented grind-it-out affair over Elizabethtown 58-37 in Saturday's homecoming contest at Colonel Gym.

"It was a very blue collar game. We can get up and down with people. What you like to be able to do going into late January and February is be versatile," Henderson County coach Tyler Smithhart said. "You need to be able to play against teams that want to slow it down like they did and play zone. You need to be able to play against teams that want to play more up-tempo, and we've done that too. It's nice that we have that kind of versatility."

Henderson County made it tough for the Panthers (9-4) to score even with the 6-foot-5 front-line duo of Zane Najdawi and Dominique Harding. E-town made just 9-of-31 field-goal attempts and was 4-of-13 in the second half as the Colonels expanded their 22-14 half-time lead to the 21-point final margin.

DARRIN PHEGLEY/THE GLEANER

"That was one of our best defensive games. We did a good job of taking away their big guys," Smithhart said. "I've got to give a lot of credit to our big guys down low. (Hunter Comer, Kaleb Duckworth and Cain Cooper) really battled down there and made it tough for those guys to get touches."

The Panthers did get to the free-throw line 31 times but made only 19 attempts.

Henderson County didn't have one of its better shooting nights either — 22-of-51 (43 percent) from the field. The Colonels did hit 10-of-13 free throws.

David Simmons, who came off the bench after sitting out Friday's win at Union County, was the offensive spark for Henderson County in the second half. The sophomore forward scored nine of his team-high 14 points in the third quarter as the Colonels increased their lead to 38-24.

It was similar to Friday's game at Union County when Duckworth took charge of the game. "We found a mismatch in the middle of that zone with Duckworth last night. Tonight it just happened to be David's night," Smithhart said. "David had a mismatch. We got him some nice looks."

Ja'Von Cotton led Elizabethtown with 14 points, while Harding added 12.

The JV Colonels (9-0) posted a 45-40 win as Brady Norman scored 18 points and Bryce Crowley added 12.

Henderson County visits Daviess County Tuesday in its next game.

Lady Cols still atop mountain, but Lady Trojans climbing

It's great to see the Webster County Lady Trojans staking a claim near the summit of the Second Region mountain top. They've lost only twice all season — both times to the Henderson County Lady Colonels.

So Henderson is unquestionably queen of the hill. Unquestioned but not unchallenged. In both defeats, the Lady Trojans played on even footing with their conquerors. The 12-1 Lady Colonels usually win by blowout. Prior to Friday, they won their last two by annihilation — a 50-point decision at Henderson County and a more modest 34-point spread against Owensboro Senior.

On December 13 Henderson County prevailed by three at Webster County. In Friday's rematch at Colonel Gym, the number was four. The latest showdown was not a thing of beauty. Both teams shot poorly and both missed 17 free throws. But when it comes to intensity, the game was downright gorgeous.

It all started with a large, boisterous crowd that created an electric atmosphere. Henderson's student block made most of the noise but Webster fans traveled well and made their presence known. It was like a Sixth District tournament game.

Count on these two teams meeting again in the postseason — maybe twice.

The game was extremely physical, and not just in the post. Players scrapped all over the court. Webster coach Parker McCalister thought Henderson won that battle in the end, while Henderson coach Jeff Haile implied that Webster was more aggressive.

The Lady Colonels found toughness in unexpected places. Coming off the bench, 5-foot-7 guard Callie Francis pulled down a team-high nine rebounds. The slender sophomore did it with active feet and a hard nose. Sharpshooter Ellie Fruit enjoyed the glamour of high scorer (21 points) but did the dirty work too, fighting it out in the middle of rebounding scrums. She pulled down eight boards. With her hair a bit disheveled by contact, 5-6 point guard Samantha Carter grabbed seven rebounds.

The Lady Trojans are a lot like the Lady Colonels. They're young and quick and love to pressure the opposition. Mariah Herrera and Darrin McNary are superior athletes in the open court. Three times, McNary went coast-to-coast for layups, while Herrera did it once.

For most of the game, however, Henderson kept them in check and did enough to win.

Leading off

The Saco River Auction Co., in Biddeford, Maine, shows a rare 1865 baseball card of the Brooklyn Atlantics.

1865 baseball card to be auctioned

PORTLAND, Maine — Six-figure bids are expected when an auction house sells a rare 148-year-old baseball card that was discovered at a yard sale in rural Maine, the auction house manager said Wednesday.

A man found the card by chance in a photo album he bought while antique picking in the small town of Baileyville on the Canadian border, said Troy Thibodeau of Saco River Auction Co. in Biddeford.

It's not the same as a modern baseball card, which became commonplace beginning in the 1880s. Instead, it's an original photograph from 1865 of the Brooklyn Atlantics amateur baseball club mounted on a card. The card shows nine players gathered around their manager.

Thibodeau said he's aware of only two such cards in existence, the other at the Library of Congress. Putting a dollar-figure value on it is difficult, he said, but he expects it to fetch at least $100,000 at the Feb. 6 auction. "There hasn't been another one that's sold," he said. "When there are only two known in the world, what's it worth?"

Last summer, the auction house sold a rare 1888 card of Hall of Fame baseball player Michael "King" Kelly for $72,000. The priciest baseball card ever is a 1909 Honus Wagner card, which sold for $2.8 million in 2007.

The Library of Congress has had another copy of the Brooklyn Atlantics photograph since the late 1800s, when it took possession of it from a New York court where the photographer, Charles Williamson, had submitted it for copyright.

Norwegian kicker dreams of NFL

Aside from his ability to boot the ball through the uprights from almost kind of angle or distance, Harvard Rugland is a complete stranger to the American version of football.

And yet the 28-year-old Norwegian, without having played a single game at any level of the sport, is suddenly pursuing a shot at making it to the NFL. And it's all because of a YouTube video.

Sound incredible? Well, so are some of the kicks and tricks Rugland can pull off with his powerful left leg.

That's why the video he put together has turned him into an Internet sensation, with 2 million views and counting. And that's why the same video turned into an inadvertent auditioning tape — earning him a tryout last month with the New York Jets.

"I never would have thought it would come to this," he said during a recent phone interview from his home in southern Norway. "I put the film up mostly for friends and family. But as it turns out, there were a lot more people who liked it. It's overwhelming."

Must be, for someone whose only previous experience with football was the European soccer version, and who has only a sketchy familiarity with the rules of the American game.

Having seen other online videos of people doing tricks with Frisbees and basketballs, he figured he'd make one with footballs to showcase his booming leg. He posted it online in mid-September, and three months later he was auditioning for the Jets.

The Jets liked what they saw enough to invite Rugland back for a second audition in March.

Grand Slam

■ Murray approaching Australian Open from new angle

By John Pye

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — The novelty of being the first British man to win a Grand Slam title in 76 years is about to give way to the reality of being a reigning major winner.

It's just another reason Andy Murray has found to keep Ivan Lendl in his corner.

Murray's career-changing win at the U.S. Open in September came shortly after his breakthrough win at the London Olympics, where he avenged a painful defeat on the same court to Roger Federer at Wimbledon.

The 25-year-old Scot said it was the most intense three months of his life. He's had time to celebrate the win and dwell on its significance, and now he is days away from his first Grand Slam event since, and at a venue where he has twice lost in the final.

"Obviously, the last few years I got close but never managed to get over the final hurdle," he said of his four previous failures in Grand Slam finals. "So whether it was a mental thing, whether it was things in my game I needed to improve, physical things, who knows exactly."

"But now that I've managed to do it, I hope that when I'm in those situations again I'll deal with them better and put less pressure on myself, which obviously will help me play better."

Murray's biggest obstacles to a second Grand Slam remain top-ranked Novak Djokovic, who is aiming for a third consecutive Australian Open title, and No. 2-ranked Federer, who has won four Australian titles among his 17 majors. Murray landed in the same half of the draw as Federer, meaning they could potentially meet in the semifinals.

Djokovic is in the other half and has the more favorable run to the final. In the absence of the injured Rafael Nadal, another Spaniard — David Ferrer — moves up to the No. 4 seeding. Ferrer has never reached a major final and would likely have to beat Djokovic, if results go according to the seedings, in the semifinals to reach that career milestone.

Serena Williams has won five Australian Open titles, more than any woman in the Open era, and with a run of 35 victories in her last 36 matches, is among the top contenders again in Melbourne. Her run includes the titles at Wimbledon, the London Olympics, the U.S. Open, the WTA Championship and the Brisbane International last week.

Top-ranked Victoria Azarenka hasn't added to her Grand Slam collection since winning at Melbourne Park last year, when she beat Maria Sharapova in the final. And she'll likely have to beat Williams to reach the final after both were drawn in the same half.

In recent seasons, Murray has arrived in Australia at the start of the season to answer questions about that long British drought that dated to Fred Perry's last major win in 1936.

Not anymore. Since Lendl first joined him as coach this time last year, the pair have worked together to hone his game. Lendl lost his first four Grand Slam finals, as well, before going on to win eight majors.

So Murray is confident that Lendl's guidance will continue to serve him well. "Having someone like Ivan around me as well — he went through a similar sort of thing — so that's obviously helped as well," Murray said. "He's given me some advice on how to deal with certain things that come with winning big events."

Murray said it was hard to describe in a few words the difference that Lendl has made to his game.

"We've worked on some minor technical things, some mental things, and we've obviously worked on tactical things as well," he said. "But he tries to keep things fairly simple and not overcomplicate things. That's something that I think especially at the beginning of my career I struggled with."

Federer thinks Djokovic is the favorite at Melbourne Park, where he has won the last two titles.

"He's probably been the best hard-court player over the last couple of years, even though Murray won the U.S. Open," he said. "Andy Murray is playing great and only going to get stronger in the next couple of years."

Djokovic lost to Australia's Bernard Tomic at the Hopman Cup mixed-team competition last week, but will be taking the Australian Open a lot more seriously.

"It's a huge challenge," he said. "I love the Australian Open. That court brings back the best memories."

"I like the hard court, I like the conditions and I'm going to go for the trophy, of course. I have high ambitions for myself, but I'm absolutely aware that it's going to be very difficult because today's Grand Slam is very competitive.

"Andy Murray winning his first Grand Slam title last year also got him to this group of players who are serious candidates to win the Australian Open title."

Federer has changed his approach for this Australian Open, avoiding playing in a warm-up tournament in 2013.

"I'm confident if mentally I'm fresh, which I feel I am, and physically I am fine, which I am, too, that I will play a good Australian Open," he said. "I think it's an exciting one. We had four different Grand Slam champions this last year and everybody seems in great shape. There's not one you could say he's not playing so well except Rafa, who's obviously not playing."

"I've never played a poor Australian Open, so of course I'm hoping for a similar result."

While the men's majors have been dominated by three players in the last decade, there's more Grand Slam winners in the women's draw.

Four female players won majors in 2011 and three shared the four trophies in 2012.

Azarenka was the only woman to win her first major in 2012. She was the main beneficiary when Serena Williams lost to Ekaterina Makarova in the fourth round of the Australian Open.

Azarenka has lost 11 of her 12 matches against Williams, including all five last year, but is confident she can turn it around and doesn't feel any extra pressure to defend a title.

"I would like to win every time we meet. It doesn't really matter where it is," she said. "I really mean it when I say that I don't look to defend anything. I look forward to repeat, to win. Defend, I don't know. You defend in a war or something, but not in tennis."

Picking up wins for the Braves were Bryce Sheffer, Robby DeZember, Trae Blackwell, Brock Ervin, Gabe Ervin, Jayce Carr, Chad Gahafer, Kane Morris, Devin Smith, Brian Carter, Cole Sherman and Raynel Brown.

On Friday, Union County beat Siegal of Murfreesboro, Tenn., 64-12.

Kelly to stay as Irish coach

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame coach Brian Kelly will be back for a fourth season after leading the Fighting Irish to the national title game this past season.

Kelly issued a statement Saturday that after interviewing with the Philadelphia Eagles, he will remain as coach of the Irish.

Kelly said he has had thoughts about coaching in the NFL, but after much reflection and conversations with those closest to him he has decided to stay with the Irish.

Kelly led the Irish to a 12-1 record this past season and has an overall record of 28-11 in three seasons with Notre Dame.

Armstrong will admit doping

AUSTIN, Texas — Lance Armstrong said he will answer questions "directly, honestly and candidly" during an interview with Oprah Winfrey next week. He will also apologize and make a limited confession to using performance-enhancing drugs, according to a person with knowledge of the situation.

Armstrong has spent more than a decade denying that he doped to win the Tour de France seven times. Without saying whether he would confess or apologize during the taping, Armstrong told The Associated Press in a text message early Saturday, "I told her (Winfrey) to go wherever she wants."

Wall returns to Wizards

WASHINGTON — John Wall is back in the game.

The Washington Wizards guard made his season debut Saturday night when he entered with 4:56 remaining in the first quarter against the Atlanta Hawks.

The former No. 1 overall pick had been sidelined since being diagnosed with a stress injury to his left kneecap in September.

Applause rippled through the crowd when Wall stood up, removed his warm-up jacket and took his place in front of the scorer's table. Then came a standing ovation at the next whistle as he walked on the court.

Players ratify new NHL deal

NEW YORK — NHL players have ratified the new labor deal but the lockout still goes on.

The union said Saturday that players voted in favor of the agreement reached with the NHL last week, however the sides still haven't finished a necessary memorandum of understanding regarding the terms of the deal that would allow training camps to open and for the schedule to be released.

Oaklawn racing washed out

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — Oaklawn Park in Hot Springs has called off live thoroughbred racing for Saturday and Sunday due to heavy rain but plans to make up the running of the $60,000 Dixie Belle stakes.

Oaklawn officials said Saturday that the track washed out due to a lengthy downpour.

The Dixie Belle is now to run on Jan. 20. Seven fillies were entered.

Cardinals charge past Bulls

Siva stars as Louisville claims easy 64-38 win over So. Florida

By Gary Graves
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — Louisville's objective against South Florida on Saturday was more about firming up its defense rather than avenging its last home loss.

Either way, the No. 3 Cardinals achieved both goals in convincing fashion.

Senior guard Peyton Siva scored 17 points to surpass 1,000 for his career and contributed a team-high three steals as Louisville held South Florida to a season-low 27 percent shooting for an easy 64-38 victory that also marked the Bulls' second-lowest point total in school history.

"We played the kind of defense we wanted to play," Cardinals coach Rick Pitino said. "They came out the entire evening and played incredible defense, the defense we've been waiting for and what we've wanted to see. I'm real proud of the guys. They did an incredible job tonight."

Louisville (15-1, 3-0 Big East Conference) held South Florida to just 12 of 45 shooting including three of 17 in the first half. The field goals allowed were a season low for the Cardinals, two fewer than what Miami (Ohio) and Missouri-Kansas City made against them earlier this season.

Saturday's defensive effort follows what the Cardinals did in the second half of Wednesday night's 73-58 victory at Seton Hall, when they held the Pirates to just 8-of-28 shooting. Louisville also registered 12 steals for the second game in a row.

Center Gorgui Dieng added 12 points and 16 rebounds while forward Chane Behanan had 12 rebounds and seven points for the Cardinals, who won their 10th in a row. Behanan played just five days after injuring his left ankle in practice and missing Wednesday's victory against Seton Hall.

Siva meanwhile bounced back from 2-of-6 shooting against the Pirates to hit seven shots, including three 3-pointers. The Big East Conference preseason player of the year became the Cardinals' 64th player to reach 1,000 career points.

"It's a major accomplishment," said Siva, who reached the milestone with a reverse layup in a 13-point first half. "I was just trying to go out there and get the win. I told Luke (Hancock) I should have dunked it, but no, I was just trying to get the win. "To be in the club with a lot of Louisville greats is great. It's a great honor."

Wire reports

C.J. Leslie scored 25 points — including six straight during a key second-half run — to help No. 20 North Carolina State beat No. 1 Duke 84-76 on Saturday.

Richard Howell added 16 points and 18 rebounds in a relentless performance for the Wolfpack (14-2, 3-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) in a matchup of the teams predicted to finish 1-2 in the league.

N.C. State was picked for the first time in nearly four decades to win the league, though two early losses drained some buzz.

No longer. Now N.C. State is back on everyone's radar, while the Blue Devils (15-1, 2-1) are no longer unbeaten.

Seth Curry scored 22 for Duke, which shot 45 percent and hung around early by crashing the boards for second-chance baskets. But the Blue Devils had no answer after halftime for Leslie and Howell, a duo that helped the Wolfpack lead all second half.

■ Indiana 88, Minnesota 81: Victor Oladipo had 20 points and six rebounds and Jordan Hulls knocked down four 3-pointers, helping Indiana hold off Minnesota's late charge.

The Hoosiers (15-1, 3-0 Big Ten) have won six straight overall and 18 in a row at Assembly Hall.

Minnesota (15-2, 3-1) was led by Andre Hollins with 25 points but had its 11-game winning streak snapped despite rallying from 23 points down at halftime to within 3 with 19.5 seconds left.

The game flipped midway through the first half when Hulls got the 3-pointer flurry started.

North Carolina State's C.J. Leslie (5) celebrates with the fans after the Wolfpack's 84-76 win over top-ranked Duke in Raleigh, N.C., on Saturday.

He and Oladipo combined for 16 points in an 18-2 run that gave Indiana a 34-17 first-half lead. The Hoosiers extended the half-time lead to 52-29.

Minnesota rallied with a 19-7 run in the final four minutes, getting as close as 84-81 but never had a chance to tie the score.

■ Kansas 60, Texas Tech 46: Kevin Young scored 14 points and Kansas beat Texas Tech for the Jayhawks' 13th straight win.

Jeff Withey and Travis Releford added 12 points each and Withey pulled down seven rebounds in the first Big 12 road game for Kansas.

The Jayhawks (14-1, 2-0 Big 12) trailed briefly early on. They started the second half with a 12-0 run and stretched their lead as the game wore on.

■ Syracuse 72, Villanova 61: C.J. Fair had 22 points, Trevor Cooney hit a pair of 3-pointers to punctuate a late surge and Syracuse beat Villanova.

Syracuse (16-1, 4-0 Big East) has won 34 straight home games, the longest active streak in the nation in Division I. Villanova (11-5, 2-1) had its seven-game winning streak snapped.

■ Florida 74, LSU 52: Kenny Boynton scored 20 points and Florida used a 31-6 run across the halves to rout LSU.

Patric Young had 14 points for the Gators (12-2, 2-0 SEC). Boynton's perimeter shooting and Young's interior play were instrumental in Florida controlling the offensive end.

■ Wisconsin 74, Illinois 51: Jared Berggren scored 15 points and grabbed a season-high 12 rebounds, and Traevon Jackson added a career-best 14 points to lead Wisconsin over Illinois.

The Badgers (12-4, 3-0 Big Ten) scored the game's first 14 points and led by 20 at halftime on the way to their sixth straight win.

■ Butler 79, Dayton 73: Roosevelt Jones scored 16 points and Butler extended its best start in four years beating Dayton for its 11th straight victory despite losing its top scorer to injury.

■ UConn 65, Notre Dame 58: Shabazz Napier scored 19 points, Tyler Olander scored 12 of his career-high 16 points in the second half and Connecticut ended the game with a 7-0 run to beat Notre Dame, ending a 12-game winning streak by the Fighting Irish.

■ Georgetown 67, St. John's 51: Otto Porter had 19 points and a season-high 14 rebounds and No. 19 Georgetown broke out of its scoring funk with a victory over St. John's.

■ New Mexico 72, Fresno State 45: Alex Kirk had 19 points and a career-high 14 rebounds and No. 25 New Mexico played without leading scorer Kendall Williams for disciplinary reasons in a rout over Fresno State.

■ Eastern Ky. 59, Morehead State 52: Mike DiNunno scored 13 points and Eastern Kentucky used a big run midway through the game for a 59-52 victory over Morehead State Saturday night.

■ Florida Atlantic 65, Western Ky. 62: Greg Gantt scored 22 points and Florida Atlantic saw its 13-point lead nearly disappear before holding off late-charging Western Kentucky for a 65-62 Sun Belt Conference win Saturday night.

helped draw attention from Louisville's 38 percent shooting in a victory that avenged last February's home loss to USF that put the Cardinals' postseason hopes in doubt.

Louisville went on to win the Big East tournament and reach the Final Four. Most of the Cardinals' roster returned, and USF coach Stan Heath said that has made them a contender for the national championship.

"Dieng is so much better and Siva's making threes," Heath said. "That was not the case in the past. You'd dare him to shoot and you'd be OK with it."

"They're legitimate. If they keep improving, keep working, they're legitimate to win it all."

Victor Rudd came off the bench to score 10 points for South Florida (9-6, 0-3). But Louisville had this one from the outset.

The best news for the Cardinals was the sooner-than-expected return of Behanan, who sprained his left ankle in practice Monday and was expected to miss up to four games. But after watching the Cardinals' win at Seton Hall from campus, the sophomore declared himself available to play on Friday after X-rays that his pain was caused by a spur rather than the sprain.

Henley, Langley lead Sony Open

The Associated Press

HONOLULU — PGA Tour rookies Russell Henley and Scott Langley will play one more round together at the Sony Open, this time with a trophy and a Masters invitation at stake.

Henley two-putted from 30 feet for birdie on the last hole for a 3-under 67. That gave him a share of the lead with Langley, who had a 65. They set the tournament scoring record through 54 holes at 17-under 193 and had a three-shot lead over Tim Clark.

Henley and Langley each have a chance to become the first rookies to win in their PGA Tour debut since Garrett Willis at the 2001 Tucson Open.

UK's Stoops praises stadium renovation plans

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON — Kentucky football coach Mark Stoops said the upcoming $110 million renovations to Commonwealth Stadium, which were announced Thursday, reinforced, to him, the school's commitment to its football program that has struggled in recent years.

The renovations will include upgrades to the Nutter Training Center, a multipurpose recruiting room, 16 to 20 private suites, about 2,000 new club seats and new media facilities.

Stoops, who was hired in December after serving as Florida State's defensive coordinator since 2010, said he and athletics director Mitch Barnhart discussed facility upgrades at his first job interview, and that it was important to Stoops but not his primary reason for accepting the job.

"This certainly helps," Stoops said. "Everything Mitch and I talked about is coming true here."

Stoops, who spoke to the media at Rupp Arena before Kentucky's game Saturday against Texas A&M, said he had a large group of recruits at the game.

Ravens edge Broncos in double OT

Desperation touchdown pass saves Baltimore in 38-35 victory

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press

DENVER — No matter where his season or his career might end, Joe Flacco will always have The Fling.

And Peyton Manning will always have to live with that throw he made, too.

Flacco's desperation 70-yard touchdown pass to Jacoby Jones with 31 seconds left in regulation saved the game for Baltimore in regulation and Manning's throw across his body in overtime all but lost it for Denver.

On a frostbitten day on the frozen tundra known as Denver, the Ravens got a 47-yard field goal from Justin Tucker 1:42 into the second overtime Saturday to pull off a 38-35 upset over Manning and the Broncos, extending linebacker Ray Lewis' career by at least one game.

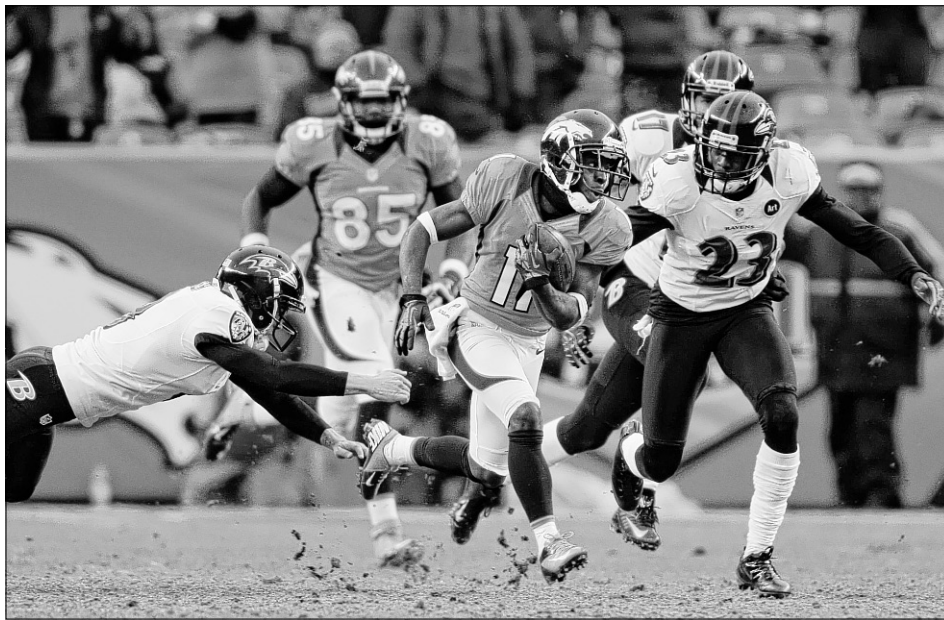

"Our team is so confident and everything went against us," Lewis said, "but we found a way to come here together and we're leaving together. It's just awesome."

Lewis, who led the Ravens with 17 tackles over this nearly 77-minute game, knelt down to the ground and put his helmet on the rock-solid turf when it was over.

After Lewis thaws out, the Ravens (12-6), 9½-point underdogs for this one, will get ready for a game at either New England or Houston, who meet Sunday for the other spot in the AFC title game.

This game, the longest since the Browns beat the New York Jets 23-20 in 1987, was an all-timer — up there with San Diego's 41-38 double-overtime victory over Miami for drama. But Flacco's throw might best be bookended next to one made by Roger Staubach, who famously coined the term "Hail Mary" after his game-winning toss to Drew Pearson beat Minnesota in the 1975 playoffs.

How to describe the Flacco Fling? On third-and-3 from his 30 with 41 seconds and no timeouts left, Flacco bought time in the pocket and saw Jones sprinting down the right sideline into double coverage.

Denver Broncos wide receiver Trindon Holliday (11) evades the Baltimore Ravens defense as he runs the opening kickoff of the second half back for a touchdown during an AFC divisional playoff game on Saturday in Denver.

Defensive back Tony Carter slowed up and let Jones streak by him. Instead of staying step for step with Jones, safety Rahim Moore tried to leap and knock down the ball. Flacco, who throws the high, deep ball as well as anyone, got it over Moore's head and into Jones' hands.

"At that point, you have to start taking shots," Flacco said. "You have to get a little lucky. Had to take a shot and everyone came through."

Jones caught it and pranced into the end zone, blowing kisses to the crowd.

Moore was on the verge of tears after the game.

"The loss, it was my fault," Moore said. "I got a little too happy. It was pathetic. My fault. Next time I'll make that play."

The teams punted three times to start overtime, setting up Denver on its 7-yard line. Manning was moving the Broncos along slowly and steadily. But on second-and-6 from the 38, he rolled to his right, stopped and threw across the field to Brandon Stokley. Graham stepped in front of the receiver for the interception, bookending the pick he made in the first quarter, which he returned 39 yards for a touchdown and a 14-7 lead.

The temperature at kickoff was 13 degrees, and Manning fell to 0-4 lifetime when the temperature is 40 or less. He finished 28 for 43 for 290 yards and accounted for all three Denver turnovers — the two picks and a lost fumble that set up the touchdown that tied the game at 28 late in the third quarter.

The last throw was the worst one, though.

"Not a good decision," Manning said. "Not a great throw, either."

Those mistakes nullified a record-setting day for returner Trindon Holliday, who returned a punt 90 yards for a touchdown and a kickoff 104 yards for another score. Both were playoff records for longest returns, as was the 248 total return yards he had.

All for naught.

This was, more or less, the unthinkable for the Broncos (13-4), who came in on an 11-game winning streak and the odds-on favorite, at 3-1, to win the Super Bowl, in Manning's hometown of New Orleans, no less.

Instead, this loss goes down with the most devastating in Denver history. Right there with the 30-27 loss to the Jacksonville Jaguars on Jan. 4, 1997 — another year when Denver looked very much like Super Bowl material.

Falcons will try to end playoff woes

Upstart Seahawks stand in way

By Charles Odum
Associated Press

ATLANTA — It's 2010 all over again for the Atlanta Falcons.

Just like two seasons back, the Falcons finished 13-3 in the regular season. Once again, they have the top seed and home-field advantage in the NFC playoffs.

This time, they vow they're mature enough to make the most of the opportunity.

The Falcons will try to end their recent trend of first-game postseason exits Sunday when they play the streaking Seattle Seahawks in the divisional playoffs. The Falcons had a first-round bye last week while rookie quarterback Russell Wilson led Seattle to a 24-14 comeback win at the Washington Redskins.

The Seahawks (12-5) bring a six-game winning streak to Atlanta.

Atlanta had never managed back-to-back winning seasons before a new era began in 2008 with general manager Thomas Dimitroff, coach Mike Smith and quarterback Matt Ryan. The Falcons have five straight winning records and four playoff seasons, including three straight.

So far, all the regular-season success has led only to postseason disappointment. Smith and Ryan are 0-3 in the postseason, including a home loss to Green Bay in 2010 and an ugly 24-2 loss at the Giants last year.

The Falcons say they've learned from the playoff defeats and are better prepared this year.

"We've been here in the past before and now we're more mature," said safety Thomas DeCoud. "We know what we can and cannot do."

"It's a sense of pride, more of an internal sense of pressure rather than anything external. As professional athletes we all want to go out there and perform well and get this monkey off our backs, so to speak."

The Falcons can only marvel at Wilson's ability to pull off a road win in his first playoff game. Wilson completed 15 of 26 passes for 187 yards and ran for 67 yards in last week's win. Seattle overcame a 14-0 deficit to beat the Redskins.

Wilson, a third-round pick, has outlasted Andrew Luck and Robert Griffin III in the playoffs.

"My expectations are very high," Wilson said. "That's allowed me to be where I am today. If I listen to everybody who said I can't do it, there's no way I could play in the National Football League, there's no way I'd be starting in the National Football League. There's no way I'd be here today."

Center Todd McClure, in his 13th season, is the only holdover from the last Atlanta team to win a playoff game, in 2004.

"I feel like this is the best team I've been on since I've been here," McClure said. "I'm not just saying that. I feel like this is the best opportunity I've had and we've had to make a run. We have to go out on Sunday and execute. We have to play our best football to win this game and I think we're ready for it."

The 35-year-old McClure says he thinks he'll return for another season. Tight end Tony Gonzalez, who is 36, says he's 95 percent certain he will retire even though he made his 13th Pro Bowl. Among other key veterans on the team are cornerback Asante Samuel and running back Michael Turner.

Looking back at 2010 and 2011, McClure says the Falcons are fortunate to have this opportunity to make up for past postseason failures. He says there is no assurance there will be another chance.

"These opportunities in the playoffs, they don't happen every year," McClure said. "Some teams seem like they're in just about every year but you look over guys' careers and it's hard to get in the playoffs. Even if I do play another year it's not a certainty I'll be back in this situation. It's like that for everybody in this locker room. We want to take advantage of where we're at."

The Falcons' offense has evolved in the five seasons under Smith, whose early teams featured Turner's runs. First-year offensive coordinator Dirk Koetter made this a pass-first offense with more screens and more big plays for Gonzalez and receivers Roddy White and Julio Jones.

Ryan set franchise marks with 4,719 yards passing and 32 touchdowns while completing 68.6 percent of his passes for another record.

With Ryan orchestrating the no-huddle attack, the Falcons have the ability for quick-strike big plays. It's a contrast to the Seahawks, who prefer to control the ball with powerful running back Marshawn Lynch, who set a career high and ranked third in NFL with 1,590 yards rushing.

"If we can hold the football, it's frustrating to an offense who wants to go fast," said Seattle coach Pete Carroll. "We're not trying to sit on the clock at all, but we're certainly committed to the running game. There is nothing better that we can do than to be making first downs and handling the football to keep them from being on the field. The best thing we could do is to keep them on the sideline, and the best way we can do that is to convert, and running gives us a great chance."

Patriots, Texans hungry to keep title hopes alive

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Vince Wilfork was a champion as a rookie with the New England Patriots. So, he wondered, how hard could it be to win the Super Bowl every year?

After the past seven seasons without another title, he has his answer.

"Winning one early in my career, you kind of get the sense that it happens like this all the time, but it doesn't," the defensive tackle said. "It's very, very hard to win at this level, at any level."

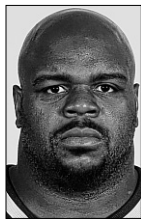

His college teammate at Miami, Andre Johnson, never reached the playoffs in his first eight seasons with the Houston Texans.

He finally got there last year. On Sunday, he faces Wilfork and the Patriots in a divisional-round game.

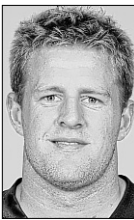

"It means a lot," the wide receiver said. "It makes you appreciate all the tough times you went through to get to this point."

The Patriots (12-4) have a rich tradition of three titles in four years before the current championship drought. They won nine of their last 10 games, are coming off a bye and are heavily favored, having routed Houston 42-14 on Dec. 10.

The Texans (13-4) have a poor history with just two postseason wins in 11 years of existence. They lost three of their last four regular-season games,

Vince Wilfork

J.J. Watt

then edged the Cincinnati Bengals 19-13 last Saturday in the wild-card round.

Those differences aside, both teams are hungry to keep the season going — all the way to a Super Bowl triumph.

New England nearly won it last season, falling to the New York Giants 21-17 on a last-minute touchdown. That was a huge disappointment for special teams captain Matthew Slater, a rookie in 2008 who wasn't part of any of the championships. He didn't even win a playoff game in his first three seasons.

"To be able to come as close as we did last year and have past failures in my previous seasons here, it just drives you and motivates you more," he said. "We don't feel like we've accomplished anything. We don't feel like we've arrived at all because it's all for naught unless you do something in the post-season. We're very driven, very motivated, very focused."

Focused on the future. The past — that 28-point romp last month — has no bearing on the rematch, coaches and players from both teams insist. "I think it's a bunch of garbage," Patriots coach Bill Belichick said. "The game will have its own elements and it will write its own story."

Texans defensive end J.J. Watt is tired of all the talk about that beating his team took.

"Obviously, we didn't play good last time we were up there," he said. "I don't think we need to keep rehashing it. I think we just need to play our style of football."

That style depends on Arian Foster running the ball. Do that well and the Texans can maintain possession and keep Tom Brady and the Patriots' league-best offense on the sideline.

Peterson, J.J. Watt unanimous All-Pro

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It's unanimous, on both sides of the ball.

Vikings 2,000-yard man Adrian Peterson and Texans pass-swatting end J.J. Watt were unanimous choices for The Associated Press All-Pro team announced Saturday.

Peterson, who came within 9 yards of breaking Eric Dickerson's single-season rushing record, and Watt, who led the NFL with 20 1-2 sacks, were selected by all 50 members of a nationwide panel of media members who cover the league.

Peterson is a three-time All-Pro, while Watt represents lots of new blood. He's among 17 players making their All-Pro debuts.

"Obviously it's a huge honor, especially for being such a young guy," said Watt, a second-year pro. "It's crazy to even think about. It's very humbling and very motivating. It makes me want to do it again and again."

Peyton Manning made his sixth team, the previous five while quarterbacking Indianapolis. He led Denver to the AFC's best record, 13-3.

Also chosen for the sixth time was Atlanta tight end Tony Gonzalez, who this season moved into second place on the career receptions list. San Francisco linebacker Patrick Willis made it for the fifth time in his six pro seasons.

The 49ers had the most All-Pros, six: Willis, fellow LBs NaVorro Bowman and Aldon Smith, guard Mike Iupati, safety Dashon Goldson and punter Andy Lee.

"As an organization, we take great pride in the success and recognition of our players," 49ers general manager Trent Baalke said. "This type of acknowledgement only comes from hard work and a team-first mentality, which all six of these men exhibit on a daily basis. They play the game the way it was meant to be played, and are very deserving of this honor."

Seattle was next with RB Marshawn Lynch, center Max Unger, cornerback Richard Sherman and safety Earl Thomas. All were selected for the first time.

Enjoy seasonal catch, release trout streams this winter

By Lee McClellan
Kentucky Afield

FRANKFORT — The buzz of the holidays is gone for another year. The college football season is over until next fall. Most hunting is gone until then, too. The sky is often low, leaden and depressing in January and February.

The stretch from New Year's to the first warm shirt-sleeve weather of March is often a long, arduous stretch of weeks. Cabin fever inflicts anglers as they pine for the sound of a drag singing, the gentle gurgle from water flowing over riffles and the satisfaction and tired body from a day of wading a stream.

You don't have to brood waiting for warm weather to go fish a stream. The 13 seasonal catch and release trout streams stretching from Casey Creek in Trigg County eastward to Left Fork, Beaver Creek in Floyd County provide excellent rainbow trout fishing free from crowds.

The catch and release season on these streams begins Oct. 1 and runs until March 31, except for Swift Camp Creek in the Red River Gorge National Geological Area. The catch and release season on this stream closes May 31. Anglers cannot keep trout

Kentucky's Seasonal Catch and Release Trout Streams:

Bark Camp Creek, Whitley County
Beaver Creek, Wayne County
Big Bone Creek, Boone County
Cane Creek, Laurel County
Casey Creek, Trigg County
Clear Creek, Bell County
East Fork, Indian Creek, Menifee County
Elk Spring Creek, Wayne County
Left Fork, Beaver Creek, Floyd County
Middle Fork, Red River, Powell and Wolfe counties
Otter Creek, Meade County
Rock Creek, McCreary County
Swift Camp Creek, Wolfe County

during the catch and release season and may only use artificial lures.

"We stock trout in October in the seasonal catch and release streams as a way to prolong the amount of time those fish are available for anglers to catch," said Dave Dreves, fisheries research biologist who helps oversee trout management in Kentucky.

Trout are a cold water species and all of Kentucky's winter blast and chill does not bother them one bit. They provide excellent sport during the darkest days of winter and bite willingly year-round.

The catch and release season allows trout to spread out from their stocking sites and settle into their natural environment, improving the fishing experience for anglers. Freshly stocked trout straight from the hatchery possess few natural defenses. Hatchery workers feed these trout regularly when young and as a result they bite anything edible they see when first released into the wild. The catch and release season gives them time to acclimate before anglers can harvest them.

The seasonal catch and release trout streams flow through some of Kentucky's most beautiful areas. East Fork, Indian Creek in Menifee County and Swift Camp Creek in Wolfe County are particularly scenic and flow inside the Red River Gorge National Geological Area. During the summer camping season, these two pastoral streams attract hordes of anglers. In January, February and March, you'll have these two trout rich streams practically to yourself.

Rock Creek flows through the Daniel Boone National Forest near the Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area in McCreary County. This picturesque stream is one of the most unique in Kentucky as Rock Creek seems to disappear as its flow squeezes between house-sized boulders in many spots. In late winter, Rock Creek gives an angler a mountain trout fishing experience.

For more information about the seasonal catch and release trout streams, visit the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources' Web page at fw.ky.gov and click on the "Fishing and Boating" tab, then "Where to Fish."

Citation angler Andy Thomossan, left, and Eric Holmes stand next to their 883-pound blue marlin, which broke the record for the biggest blue marlin in the 52-year history of the Big Rock Blue Marlin Tournament in Morehead City, N.C.

Fish story lands in NC's high court, $1M on line

By Emery P. Dalesio
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — About four hours after the fishing charter boat Citation left dock on the Outer Banks to compete in one of the country's richest deep-sea fishing tournaments, crew members were in the fight of their lives. Something huge was hooked, but it was invisible to human sight as it dove for the ocean bottom about 27 miles off the North Carolina coast.

Five hours later they hauled up a monster, an 883-pound, 14-foot-long blue marlin. They knew the silvery-blue torpedo of muscle bigger than a bear would mean a huge payday in the June 2010 Big Rock Blue Marlin Tournament when they recorded their catch in coastal Morehead City.

"When we finally saw it we couldn't believe it," the Citation's captain, Eric Holmes of Buxton, said at the time. "To catch a fish this big ... it's something. It really is. We got lucky and it's good to be lucky."

But their luck soured. The boat's owners landed in a fight for the $910,000 in prize money that continued Tuesday with arguments to North Carolina's Supreme Court.

Tournament officials disqualified the Citation's crew because the 22-year-old first mate, Peter Wann of Alexandria, Va., did not have a $15 North Carolina fishing license when the fish was hooked. His license was purchased while the Citation was still two hours out to sea and chugging toward a landing.

Tournament rules state that a fishing license is required for everyone aboard a participating vessel, said E. Bradley Evans, a lawyer for the contest's organizers. That rule was also emphasized at a pre-tournament meeting that Holmes and Wann did not attend.

The nonprofit group that runs the tournament has no gain in disqualifying the Citation, but did so to protect the contest's integrity, Evans said.

"If none of the rules are material, then people could take rifles and shoot fish. They could fish at any hours of the day if they want to," Evans said. He said the rules were critical to the operation of the tournament and the most important aspect.

Wann thought the Citation had a blanket license that covered the entire crew, and when he found out there may have been a question if his license was active he got online while still miles at sea and bought another while still outside the state's territorial waters, which extend three miles from shore, said Darren Jackson, an attorney for the boat's owners.

"Maybe it was just luck that they happened to have a computer with Internet access out in the middle of the ocean, but they did. And they did get the license," Jackson said.

State regulators couldn't decide when or if Wann violated state fishing laws and had to amend the citation they issued the mate, Jackson said.

Athletes from college to pro are offering to help in Newtown

By Pat Eaton-Robb
Associated Press

NEWTOWN, Conn. — Newtown first-grader Katelyn Sullivan has been sleeping in her parents' bed since last month's massacre at Sandy Hook Elementary school.

Katelyn, who attends another school in town, knew seven of the victims. They were in her Sunday school or dance class, or just friends. But on this day, the 6-year-old wasn't thinking about bad men or death. She was meeting soccer stars such as Mia Hamm and Landon Donovan, and kicking a ball around the field at the Newtown Youth Academy, a nonprofit sports center.

"The best part was probably playing soccer," she said. "I was playing with professional players, but I don't know who they were."

She just shrugged when her parents mentioned that one was Alexi Lalas, the retired star of the U.S. national team.

Since the tragedy, Katelyn and her two older brothers also have met members of the Harlem Globetrotters and the UConn men's basketball team. Brooklyn Nets forward Kris Humphries picked Katelyn up at one event to help her dunk a basketball.

But what mattered to her parents was their children were having fun.

"It's just been huge," said Joe Sullivan, Katelyn's father. "It's a pick-me-up for the community and the kids to get back to a little bit of a sense of normalcy and to kind of take their minds off of everything that has happened."

The sports world began responding shortly after the 20 children and six adults were killed inside the school Dec. 14.

New York Giants receiver Victor Cruz came to play tag football and video games with the family and friends of victim Jack Pinto, after learning the 6-year-old shooting victim was to be buried in a replica of Cruz's jersey. The Giants later hosted families from Sandy Hook at a game.

"I didn't want to go in there and make a speech," Cruz said. "I just wanted to go and spend some time with them and be someone they could talk to, and be someone they can vent to, talk about how much of a fan they are of the team, or different times they watched the Super Bowl." Later in the month, NBA and NHL stars helped lead a series of clinics and games for Newtown children at the Chelsea Piers sports center in nearby Stamford. Pro Lacrosse players did the same in Newtown.

And college hockey players from the University of New Haven came to help staff the center when it opened its doors to Newtown children to come in and play.

The media has been barred from most of the events.

"We made sure everyone understood that if they were coming, they had to be playing with the kids," said Kaki Taylor, who helped organize the events at the youth academy.

Gold medal gymnast Aly Raisman visited the center and a local gymnastics school, where one little girl told her it was the best day of her life.

"A lot of the kids who died were young gymnasts, so I felt like I had connection to them," Raisman said. "It made me feel really good to do something for them."

■ Bald eagles getting easier to spot along state's waterways

MIKE LAWRENCE / THE GLEANER

ABOARD THE CQ PRINCESS, Kentucky Lake— Along the rugged Land Between the Lakes shoreline, the bird was perched comfortably at the top of a tree, its characteristic clunky football shape standing out just like a bald eagle should among the bare branches of winter.

Except, upon closer inspection with the help of a photographer's really long lens, this bird wasn't a juvenile bald eagle at all as initially thought by naturalists aboard the yacht tour.

This one was a golden eagle sitting side-by-side with an adult bald eagle, which caused considerable excitement among both the experienced and novice bird-watchers and state park and Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources personnel who were present to help passengers spot America's bird out in the wild.

The boat's passengers were participating in a special sneak preview to the Eagle Watch Weekends that Kentucky Dam Village, Lake Barkley and Kenlake state resort parks are hosting this month and next.

"That's a really special treat," said Lake Barkley naturalist Mary Schmidt, who led the boat tour and helped those on board spot the 22 eagles counted on that afternoon tour as the luxury yacht glided along the LBL coastline. "We don't see those every year."

A new challenge, perhaps, is developing for bird-watchers who are finding it increasingly easier to spot the magnificent bald eagle along the state's western waterways. Bird-watchers on a tour this

IF YOU GO ...

Eagle Watch Weekends have returned to three western Kentucky state parks — Kentucky Dam Village at Gilbertsville, Lake Barkley at Cadiz and Kenlake at Aurora — starting this weekend and continuing into February.

The park system sponsors this wildlife-watching opportunity as bald eagles gather around the major lakes of western Kentucky looking for food.

For four decades, Kentucky State Parks have offered Eagle Watch Weekends, a chance to view the eagles from land and water and learn about the national symbol and other wildlife.

“Right now we have more bald eagles in Kentucky than any other time in history.”

Brent McCarty, Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources

The Eagle Watch Weekends at Kentucky Dam Village (continuing today), Lake Barkley (Jan. 26-27) and Kenlake (Feb. 2-3) will include an option to view eagles from the CQ Princess, a 96-foot yacht. Guests can view eagles from inside the CQ Princess or from outside decks. There is still space available at all parks for the Eagle Watch Weekends.

The tours are available by excursion yacht or van and will be led by state park naturalists and Department of Fish and Wildlife biologists. Ticket prices for the tours range from $25 to $50 a person.

Most tours last from two to 3½ hours. The weekends also include an evening program on birds of prey.

Guests should bring warm clothes, rain gear and binoculars. These trips can take place under extreme weather conditions. The resorts offer lodges, cottages and restaurants. The phone

5-year-old still a little unclear about definition of 'Aunt Tique'

Before Christmas, 5-year-old Haylee Kanipe, daughter of Camilla and the late Heath Kanipe, was visiting the home of her grandparents, Susie and Steve Bender of Henderson, and she wanted to play with an old toy iron that her "Mammy" has saved from childhood.

Mammy said they could get it out but warned the little girl that it might not work any more if they actually tried to iron with it. "It's an antique," Mammy said.

Haylee looked at it and wanted to know what an antique is.

"Well, it's old," Mammy explained. "Like Mammy. Mammy is an antique."

Haylee took this in and then responded: "Well, hello, Aunt Tique! Come give me a hug."

On a recent evening, dad Brian Vinson of Wellston, Ohio, decided to attempt a teachable moment while sons Jonathan, 8, and Andrew, 6, were watching a "Clone Wars" cartoon.

Dad commented to the boys (who are the grandsons of Larry and Sarah Vinson of Robards) that some people are two-faced.

"If they talk badly about others, they'll talk badly about you," he said.

Then he asked a hypothetical question about what might happen in that situation.

The 6-year-old piped up with a way to deal with it.

"I would wait patiently until she is done talking," Andrew said, "and then I would smack her!"

Ready to get your young children exposed to books, reading and a library environment in general?

There's still time to join the weekly story hour programs at the Henderson County Public Library.

The program for ages 2 to 3 ("Toddler Time") is full, but there's room for new participants in story hours for ages 0 to 24 months and for ages 3 to 5 and 4 to 5.

Here's the schedule:

■ Newbies (expectant parents and infants 0-14 months): 9 a.m. first and third Tuesday of the month.

■ Book Babies (ages 15-24 months): 10:30 a.m. Wednesdays.

■ Mother Goose Storytime (ages 3-5): 6:30 p.m. Mondays.

■ Preschool Story Hour (ages 4-5): 10:30 a.m. Thursdays.

You can sign up for the second "semester" of story hour by calling the library at 826-3712 or by visiting the library at 101 S. Main St. during library hours, which are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 1:30 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The Henderson Area Arts Alliance's Family Series is over for the season, but the arts alliance has plenty of other family-oriented programming coming up in the new year.

In February, the Broadway hit "Shrek, The Musical" will come to town.

The musical is based on the Oscar-winning DreamWorks film that brought the story of an unseemly ogre to life as he rescued a feisty princess named Fiona.

Featuring a terrific score of 19 songs, big laughs, dancing and breathtaking scenery, "Shrek, The Musical" is part romance, part twisted fairy tale and all irreverent fun for the family audience.

The show will be staged at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 10. Tickets are available at the box office, 831-9800.

On April 12, the alliance will present "Jack Hanna's Into The Wild Live!" featuring animals, stories and film footage of his adventures. Ticket information for that show is also available at the box office.

'Take a stand'

Rescue group leader challenges lawmakers to enact tough local spay-neuter ordinances

Robin Dance yearns for a time when homeless animals are the exception rather than the rule around Henderson.

In fact, her feelings wouldn't even be hurt if some day Henderson had no need for her pet-rescue services.

"I would love to be out of business," the president and founder of Pay It Forward Animal Welfare Network said.

But if Henderson is ever going to reach a point at which stray animals aren't as common as ants at a picnic, the community as a whole must embrace the importance of spaying and neutering its pets.

All pets.

"We want to encourage spay-neuter as the main component in the battle against homeless animals in our community," Dance said.

Pay It Forward sponsors a monthly low-cost spay-neuter clinic in partnership with Vanderburgh Humane Society. The way the clinics work is that members of the public are able to reserve spots for their cats and dogs.

Then Pay It Forward volunteers such as Opal Zollinger, Barbara Fowler, Kelly Hinton and Sue Ellen Payne make all the arrangements regarding appointments, paperwork and transportation to VHS in Evansville from a central drop-off location in Henderson.

The public has warmly received the opportunity to have their pets altered at reduced prices, Dance said, and just last week the group passed the 800-pet mark in the number of local dogs and cats that have been spayed/neutered in the past 30 months through the PIF-sponsored clinics.

"When you do spay and neuter and see the numbers total up, you know people want to alter their animals," she said.

Gradually, the clinics could become less necessary — if the city and county would enact tougher local ordinances not only on the spay-neuter issue but also on other pet-related problems.

Dance has a six-item wish list of local ordinances that she would like to see get passed eventually, all of which would make Henderson a better community for its human, canine and feline residents:

KATHY MOORE

PET COLUMNIST

1. An ordinance that addresses the basic care of all animals that would include very specific requirements for housing, food, water and tethering (length of time on tether and length of tether).

2. An ordinance that more specifically addresses neglect and abuse of all animals.

These first two items are "moral issues," Dance said, "things as a community morally we should do."

3. An ordinance that mandates that all organizations that adopt animals out to the public must have them spayed/neutered and microchipped prior to adoption, unless it is specified in writing by a licensed veterinarian on why the procedures should be delayed.

4. An ordinance that would require all pet cats and dogs to be spayed or neutered.

5. If No. 4 is not possible, then there should be at least a mandatory spay-neuter on all owned outdoor cats, which "multiply at a rate of three to four times than dogs," Dance said.

6. An ordinance that addresses the spaying and neutering of any animal that is picked up by Animal Control. The Humane Society of Henderson County currently charges a pickup fee when an owner claims a lost pet, Dance said. Part of that fee could be used for the mandatory spay-neuter of the animal if it hasn't already been altered.

Dance said she realizes that it would take years to get so many ordinances passed, but she believes that tackling them one at a time is feasible.

"You have to start somewhere. As much as it pains people in this community to hear about spay and neuter,

Sign-up now in progress for Feb. 13 low-cost clinic

Gleaner staff

Feb. 8 is the deadline to reserve a place in the Feb. 13 low-cost spay-neuter clinic sponsored by Pay It Forward Animal Welfare Network.

"Go ahead and call because we'll run out of spots quickly," said Robin Dance, PIF founder.

The clinic is offered in conjunction with Vanderburgh Humane Society to pet owners of any income level.

The cost is $55 for a female dog and $50 for a male dog, except those that weigh more than 100 pounds are $25 extra. Female cats are $40, while male cats are $30. Feral cats in traps are $30 each. Shots also are available for $11 each.

Dance said that half-price sponsorships are available for eight dogs and eight cats.

The reduced fees will be offered on a first-come, first-served basis and are the result of local animals lovers donating part of the cost of the procedure, in an effort to encourage pet owners to have their pets spayed or neutered.

"To sponsor these animals is a good way to give back to the community," Dance said, noting that contributors can split up their donation as they wish among dogs and cats and the amount that goes into a sponsorship. The donation is also tax-deductible, she noted.

"It's a good way to pay it forward," Dance said.

To reserve a spot or to sponsor a pet, call 724-0614 or 724-0443.

Harry, a 1 1/2-year-old Lab-pit mix, is available for adoption from Pay It Forward Animal Welfare Network. He is house- and crate-trained, neutered and microchipped and "needs somebody who will spend quality time with him," PIF President Robin Dance said.

it's the main component" of reducing the pet overpopulation, she said. "If the city and county want to eliminate animal control problems, they've got to start working to eliminate the problem, and that's too many animals running around loose."

Dance said spay-neuter ordinances can be written in a fashion that virtually everyone can agree upon.

"There are ways to work it to everybody's advantage," she said, such as charging annual fees for unaltered animals and then putting the fees into a spay-neuter fund for people needing financial assistance with the procedure for their pet.

The rescue group founder would especially like to see local "backyard breeders" put out of business, as the most common type of dog deliberately bred around here is pit bulls.

Dance said she uses pit bulls as an example, "not out of fear or dislike of the breed, but statistically it's one of the most bred dogs in our community and by most backyard breeders."

She's quick to point out that she personally is fond of pit bulls.

"I owned one for 15 years. I know the good and the bad of the dogs. Some are wonderful dogs," she said. "They are awesome dogs. They have great personalities; they're smart."

However, "the pure fact is that pit bulls and pit bull mixes make up over half of the dogs that end up in shelters and are the last to be adopted and most likely euthanized. It's sad for them."

A side effect of a mandatory spay-neuter law is that it would help stop much of the abusive backyard breeding and inbreeding that goes on now, thus eliminating many of the animals that are used in dog fighting.

"I'm not a breed-specific law person," she said. "But if you get it under control, you're going to solve a lot of issues," such as dogfighting

KATHY MOORE / THE GLEANER

Robin Dance, president of Pay It Forward Animal Welfare Network, stands with her foster dog Harry, a Labrador and pit bull mix who is typical of the type of dog that is overly bred around here. Dance believes that a tough spay-neuter law would not only drastically reduce the number of homeless pets, but it would also help resolve other community issues.

and shelter overcrowding. "I'm not out to get them all. I just want them to be spayed and neutered."

She added: "The bottom line is you have responsible people with animals and you have irresponsible people. Spay-neuter laws are to rein in the irresponsible people."

Ultimately, Dance said, such laws will also save local governments money.

"If they start decreasing the number of animals roaming our town and those being dumped and neglected, they will see a decrease in the number of animals in the shelter," she said. "When things start working, people will say, 'Hey, that's a great idea.'"

Dance points to states in the North and Northeast that have tough animal laws and how often residents of those areas now seek pet adoptions from states like Kentucky that animal surpluses.

"I'd rather be out of animals in this community and have to pull from somewhere else (when somebody is looking for a pet) than to deal with the abundance of them. It's an epidemic. It's a problem."

As much as she supports adoption and rescue efforts, the huge population of homeless animals can sometimes become disheartening, making her feel like she's spinning her wheels, she said.

"For every dog you save, somebody else lets their dog breed and have 10 puppies that may or may not get good homes," she said. "It's just an endless cycle."

"We know why we're doing it. Every animal we save is well worth every minute we spend" on finding good homes.

"But some days when you get 25 calls and 50 emails, you just wonder when will it stop."

Dance challenges Henderson residents and local lawmakers to be bold enough to speak out for better, tougher ordinances.

"Take a stand," she said. "Change our community." It won't be quick and it won't be easy.

"We know it is an uphill battle, but it's one we are willing to climb."

Take us home

BK is 4 years old, but he hasn't lost his kitten-like personality.

"He is very affectionate," said shelter staffer Misty Payne. "He just wants to be held and loved on."

BK, who has been at the shelter since Jan. 2, has already been neutered.

Because his previous owner allowed children to "poke and pull on him," Payne said, "he doesn't like small kids very much. He would be best in a home with older children."

Overall, the tabby is a "very loving and playful kitty," she added.

His adoption fee is $50.

Another older shelter resident with a youthful attitude is Sambone, a 6-year-old easygoing coonhound mix who has been at the shelter since mid-December.

"He seems to like everybody," said Animal Control Officer Lisa Coots, and enjoys being around people. "He's a big baby."

Fellow staffer Payne noted that Sambone "is a very calm, mellow dog. He would do best in a home with a big yard and older kids as he needs a calm, quiet home to retire in."

Sambone is heartworm-positive, however, and would need to start treatment as soon as he gets into a home, as the shelter isn't conducive to such treatment as he should be kept in a quiet, non-stressful environment during treatment. The shelter will help pay for the heartworm treatment, Payne said.

Sambone's adoption fee is $85.

Adoption hours at the shelter are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays; 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesdays; noon to 5 p.m. Wednesdays; and 9 a.m. to noon Saturdays.

Master Gardener class starting in February

Do you want to become an Extension Master Gardener? Here is your chance. Beginning Feb. 5, the Henderson County Cooperative Extension Service will offer the Extension Master Gardener education program.

The Master Gardener program is a garden education program designed to cover all aspects of horticulture and gardening. Master Gardener classes cover subjects such as lawn care, woody plants, fruits, vegetables, landscape design, insects, diseases, pruning and much more. Certified Master Gardeners are also outreach volunteers for the UK Cooperative Extension Service by conducting community outreach programs and projects in Henderson County.

The training program will take 13 weeks to complete and will begin with the first class on Feb. 5. Classes will be held from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. on Tuesdays. The cost for the program will be $85, which covers the cost of the training manual and other materials.

How do you sign up? You need to register by visiting the Henderson County Cooperative Extension Office at 3341 Zion Road, located across the street from East Heights Elementary School. You can also call 826-8387 to request a registration form by mail or email, but registration must be paid by Feb. 1. Registration information can also be found online at <http://henderson.ca.uky.edu/>.

Not only is the Extension Master Gardener program a great way to learn all aspects of gardening, Master Gardeners who complete the education training can join the Henderson County Master Gardener Association and become a Certified Extension Master Gardener.

To become certified, you must complete and pass the education training and volunteer 30 hours through the cooperative extension service and the Master Gardener Association. As part of the Master Gardener Association, you can meet new friends and network with other garden enthusiasts.

For more information, contact the local extension service at 826-8387.

Vegetable Crops Academy

The UK Vegetable Crops Academy will take place Jan. 22-23 at the Daviess County Extension Service. It is a two-day class geared toward commercial vegetable growers, which includes those farmers who sell at farmers markets, roadside stands and wholesale producers.

The program would also benefit the beginner. This program will provide many basic principles of growing vegetables for commercial sales. Topics will include the principles of plant diseases, insect management, fertility, nutrition, irrigation, equipment and marketing vegetable crops.

To sign up, bring $20 (checks made to Daviess County Program Funds) to the Henderson County Extension Service by this

Vegetable Gardening 101

The Henderson County Cooperative Extension Service will host a program on Vegetable Gardening 101. Henderson County Extension Master Gardener Brenda Hester will teach the class, which will cover the basic principles of home vegetable gardening.

The class will take place at noon and 6 p.m. this Wednesday at the Henderson County Cooperative Extension Expo and Education Center. Choose which time works better for you. The class is free and open to anyone interested. Call 826-8387 to sign up by this Tuesday.

Heirloom-plant varieties have much to offer

■ Fragrance, performance outshine other annuals

By Joe Lamp'l
Scripps Howard News Service

With the passing of another year, perhaps I am becoming more nostalgic. That would certainly explain my growing love of old-fashioned, heirloom-plant varieties. They're the ones cherished enough to be passed on from generation to generation, along with the story of why each is worth preserving.

Beyond the common assumption that heirlooms always refer to edibles, there are virtually limitless ornamental varieties as well.

Unlike hybrids that don't reproduce genetic copies from seeds, many historic plants are open-pollinated. The seeds can be collected for saving and sowing later, or be left to self-sow.

Either way, the result is a second generation just like the first. And the hummingbirds, bees, butterflies and other beneficial insects that visit the heirloom garden are magnificent.

Part of the reason for that is that heirloom plants tend to be more fragrant, and fragrance is a strong attractant for many of nature's visitors to the garden.

Performance in the garden is another admired trait to many heirloom annuals providing quick, long-lasting color. They're also great for filling empty spots while you're waiting for a perennial or shrub to mature.

And nothing could be easier to care for. Full sun, well-drained soil and a regular application with a balanced granular or liquid fertilizer should have you well on your way to a vivid display of colorful blooms all summer long.

As you fan though the multitude of catalogs and contemplate your seed order

Family can spread out in two-story home

Special to The Gleaner

Raised brick arches crisply outline the Bloomsburg's two-story entry as well as the half-rounds crowning two large multipaned windows. Neat rows of turned bricks underscore those windows while defining the wainscoting's upper limit.

Inside, light washes into the two-story foyer through sidelights, a rectangular transom and the lofty arch-top window above. Double doors on the right open into another bright room that could be either a dining room or home office.

Double doors on the right open into a window-bright gathering space that comprises the family room, nook and kitchen. An arched opening leads from the hall straight into the formal living room.

The family room's fireplace is next to cabinetry that could house a home entertainment center.

A wide multipaned window finds most of the back wall; sliding glass doors do the same at the rear of the nook. These lead out onto a partially covered patio.

An exceptionally large walk-in pantry hides behind a pocket door on the edge of a galley kitchen that's open above the counter on one side.

flames in the family room or chat with family and friends. An extra-large utility room is nearby, as is a three-car garage and the dining room/office.

Luxuries in the owners' suite include a spa tub, dual vanity, walk-in closet and separately enclosed shower and toilet. Sliding doors in the sleeping area offer direct access to a private patio.

Two more bedrooms, a skylit library/loft, a bathroom and a bonus room are upstairs.

Cup and saucer vine (Cobaea scandens); 20- to 40-foot vine; pale green blooms turn purple as they age summer to fall; sow seed indoors and barely cover with soil 8 weeks before last expected frost; transplant outside 2 feet to 3 feet apart; great screen plant, it will climb any rough surface using hooked tendrils.

Tassel flower (Emilia coccinea); 18 inches to 24 inches by 8 inches; tiny, orange blooms late spring to fall; full sun; sow seed outdoors, 1/8 inch deep after last expected frost; thin to 6 inches; plant in large masses for best effect.

"Ten Weeks" stock (Matthiola incana); 15 inches to 18 inches by 12 inches; blooms white, pink and lavender late spring to early fall; clovelike scent; full sun; sow seed indoors on soil surface 8 weeks before last expected frost; thin to 12 inches; cut stalks that are just opening at the bottom for long-lasting fragrance; deadheading encourages reblooming.

Sweet William "Auricula-Eyed Mixed" (Dianthus barbatus); 18 inches by 12 inches; biennial, white, red and pink blooms with a clovelike scent second year, late spring to early summer; full sun to part shade; sow seed outdoors 1/4 inch deep after last expected frost; thin to 12 inches

Love-in-a-mist (Nigella damascena); 20 inches by 9 inches; spidery, blue blooms spring to summer; full sun; sow seed outdoors 1/8 inch deep after last expected frost; thin to 8 inches; prolific self-seeder, deadhead to control spreading.

'First love'

61 years later, teen sweethearts tie knot

By Samantha Bilharz
Mattoon Journal-Gazette

MATTOON, Ill. — Betty Parker and Bob Easton's marriage has been 61 years in the making — after all, they first fell in love when they were teenagers.

In late December, the duo made it official with a Christmas-themed wedding at Brookstone Estates North in Mattoon. The bride wore purple, while the groom dressed in a gray suit and tie.

This is the second marriage both for Parker, 78, and Easton, 79, who have known each other since 1952.

Parker was just 16 when she first started dating 17-year-old Easton. The pair met through Parker's cousin in Greenup and after a year of dating they went their separate ways.

Both Parker and Easton said to this day they still can't remember why they split up in the first place but are just happy to have rekindled their romance after many years apart.

"Neither of us remember what happened," Easton said. "All we know is we were too young at the time to get married and so we moved on and ended up losing touch."

After the breakup, Easton moved to Mattoon to work, joined the Air Force and then married. Parker stayed in Greenup and ended up getting married as well, but eventually moved to Mattoon.

Each raised a family. After three children and 58 years of marriage, Easton's first wife died. Parker became a widow after 38 years with her first husband, with whom she raised three children.

Even with distance and time between them, Easton tried to reconnect with Parker but was unsuccessful until a few years ago when he was visiting a friend in a Mattoon apartment building. He noticed Parker's mother also lived there.

"I buzzed Betty's mom to try to figure out where her daughter was," Easton said.

Betty Parker, 78, and Bob Easton, 79, walk down the aisle after getting married Dec. 30 in Mattoon, Ill.

He was able to get a hold of Parker's mom, who got the couple back in touch again.

"My mom called me and I came over to talk to him," Parker said. "We have stayed in touch ever since that day."

Parker and Easton started dating again on July 4, 2012.

"We have always thought a great deal of each other, there is no doubt about that," Easton said.

In October, Easton worked up the courage to ask Parker to marry him.

"I bought her a diamond ring for $2 at a garage sale and told her, 'This is all I have right now but you will get a real one later,'" Easton said, smiling.

Easton held up his end of the bargain and Parker received a real sparkler on her left hand before the wedding.

"The fake diamond on the $2 ring was bigger than the one she has now," Easton said with a laugh.

After getting engaged, Easton convinced Parker to move from Mattoon to his home in Clinton.

"Morally, by living together, we needed to be married," Easton said. "That's the way it's supposed to be."

Parker said Easton had asked her to marry him at least twice, but moving away from Mattoon deterred her at first.

"She said 'yes' because she can't live without me," Easton said with a smile.

Before getting married, Easton made Parker a promise that she couldn't turn down.

"He said he plans on making me happier than I have ever been in my life and I'm looking forward to that," Parker said.

The couple were married among about 100 family, friends and residents at Brookstone. Neither Parker nor Easton live at Brookstone, but Parker's best friend and maid of honor Barb Fetters has resided there for five years.

Parker visits Fetters at Brookstone often, so the facility seemed like a second home for the bride.

"I'm happy that she got married and I like Bob too; he makes Betty very happy," Fetters said.

The wedding was all made possible by Leah Hanson, assistant executive director at Brookstone, who said she wanted to do something nice for the couple. It's a bitter-sweet moment for those at Brookstone.

"We consider Betty our own because she is always here with Barb and now that Betty is moving away we won't be able to see her anymore," Hanson said.

Wedding plans were in the works for about a month, but Hanson said she didn't mind because she was giving back to Betty, who had done so much for Brookstone and its residents.

"Betty has done a lot for us in the past by helping with activities and visiting with residents," Hanson said. "She has just been a good friend to Brookstone overall and a good friend to the residents."

Once the bride and groom were married, both Easton and Parker said a feeling of calmness set in. "I feel relieved and happy," Parker said. "It's been a long time coming."

Easton said he is eager to begin the next chapter of his life with his new bride.

"I'm happy to start my life with her," Easton said. "I would have never gotten married again if it wasn't for her; she's special."

Easton said he knew in the back of his mind that one day he would end up with Parker.

"I always thought somewhere down the road we would get back together," he said.

The couple currently reside in Clinton and both said they are talking about possible honeymoon spots but haven't nailed down a definite location yet.

"We are each other's first love and if we were older when we had first met we would have probably been married a long time ago," Easton said.

Anniversaries

Pugh 35th

Gary and Cynthia Pugh of Robards celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary on Dec. 17 with a getaway to Gatlinburg, Tenn.

Pugh and the former Cynthia Williams were married on Dec. 17, 1977, at Bellfield Baptist Church in Henderson. The Rev. Dave Overton officiated. They were attended by Beth Lindsey Taylor and Philip Slaughter.

They are the parents of two children: Jeremy Daniel Pugh of Sebree and Kiley Elisabeth Lear of Henderson.

They also have one grandson.

Try to limit activities with bickering bridesmaids

Q: My bridal party is divided into two cliques — my high school friends and my college friends — and they're constantly trying to outshine each other.

What should I do — bridesmaid intervention?

A: Yikes! Tension between bridesmaids is never fun. Normally, I'd suggest having more group outings to try to ease them into friendship (or at least cordiality), but it doesn't sound like that's in the cards.

Instead, limit the big get-togethers and go for While many opinions are good, having too many (especially in this case) isn't the best option when planning your wedding.

Policy

The Gleaner's deadline for submitting weddings, engagements, anniversaries and birth announcements is NOON on Tuesday before Sunday of publication.

Parents may submit a birth announcement for publication by filling out a form at The Gleaner office, 455 Klutey Park Plaza, during business hours, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays, or a form can be requested by fax or mail.

Announcements can also be emailed to features@thegleaner.com. The deadline is noon Tuesday for Sunday publication.

We publish engagement and wedding announcements one time and once a week in the Sunday Features section.

There is no charge for this service, but there are some rules:

Wedding accounts should appear in the newspaper within 12 weeks after the wedding.

Forms outlining the information that can be used in the announcements are available at the newspaper office at 455 Klutey Park Plaza or the form can be mailed or faxed to you. They also are available at www.thegleaner.com.

The announcements can include a photograph of the bride, bride-to-be or of the couple.

The Gleaner does not publish wedding announcements in the Sunday edition immediately following a Friday or Saturday wedding.

Include a phone number with your information in case we have questions.

New book by 'The Shack' author now available

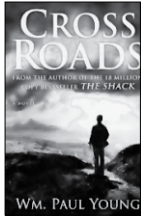

Special to The Gleaner

A new novel by the author of the best-seller "The Shack" is now available at the Henderson County Public Library.

FICTION

"Cross Roads" by William Paul Young — Tony Spencer is egotistical and he is proud of his business success, even if it did come at a great price. When a cerebral hemorrhage leaves Tony in a coma, he awakens to find himself in a surreal world that brings to light his life choices in a startling way. Tony is left to re-examine his life so that he may be redeemed for his past transgressions.

At the library

"The Wrath of Angels" by John Connelly — When the wreckage of a plane is discovered in Maine, there is nobody on it nor was the plane ever reported missing. But the wreckage itself is very important, because there is a list somewhere in the plane that shows all who have struck a deal with the devil. And now there is a battle for who will get to the list first.

"Too Bright to Hear Too Loud to See" by Juliann Garey — Greyson Todd, a successful studio executive, is restless and anguished when he decides to leave his wife and daughter to spend the next decade traveling the world. Along with his travels, he allows his bipolar disorder that he has kept hidden to rule his actions. Greyson's adventures, the breakdown of his own father, and the estrangements of his marriage weave themselves together into an intimate look at mental illness.

NON-FICTION

"Be Good" by Randy Cohen — The New York Times Magazine "Ethicist" columnist Randy Cohen helps readers find their own ethical compass to some of life's most challenging dilemmas. Written in a Q&A format, it challenges readers to think about how they would respond when facing everyday moral challenges and will stir some healthy debate.

"The Handbuilt Home" by Ana White — "The Handbuilt Home" features 34 simple, versatile projects with easy-to-follow instructions that require minimal equipment. There are beds, organizers, chairs, tables and much more. Ana White sought to make well-designed furniture at minimal cost as an alternative to the furniture you see in your favorite stores.

Viewers everywhere can't get enough of 'Downton Abbey'

By Neal Justin and Kristin Tillotson
Minneapolis Star Tribune

Matt Milne, Joanne Froggatt and Rob James-Collier star on "Downton Abbey."

Last call had just been announced at the Beverly Hills Hilton's lobby bar when a PBS executive approached one of the last remaining parties with a question for its most dapper member.

Are you Hugh Bonneville? Yes, he replied, shaking her hand as she proclaimed her love of his portrayal of stubbornly proud Lord Grantham on "Downton Abbey."

One problem. Bonneville had retired to his room an hour ago. The practical joker was co-star Brendan Coyle, aka Mr. Bates, the cursed valet. A gentleman in real life as well, Coyle didn't reveal his true identity to the star-struck exec.

For her case of mistaken identity, the network suit should be sentenced to a two-week stint in Oscar the Grouch's trash can.

"Downton" is a genuine sensation, chalking up tea-spilling numbers in the PBS universe.

In this soap opera, though, the real star is the story, an unpredictable roller-coaster ride, by English-period-drama standards, that would make even Susan Lucci queasy.

The second season of "Downton" is the most-watched "Masterpiece" series on record, according to PBS.

Tom Holter, programming director in the Minneapolis area, said, "There's really nothing like it, to draw this size of audience. Only the occasional 'Antiques Roadshow' episode comes close."

Holter admits that he didn't watch the show himself until his college-age daughter was home for the holidays.

The series, now in its third season, has also been very popular online, indicating a younger-skewing audience nationwide. Season 2 received seven times the number of video streams as Season 1, which was also more than the entire "Masterpiece" season received last year.

"None of us had any expectation of this at all," Bonneville said. "The first time it occurred to me that we were breaking boundaries was when a lad at my son's playground came up to me — he was about 10 or 11 — and said, 'I don't like that Thomas.'"

Despite being better known as their characters than what's on their driver's licenses, the cast seems tickled pink by any recognition at all.

Joanne Froggatt, who plays elfin, unflappable Anna Bates, discovered where she stood among fans while preparing for her real-life nuptials.

"The vicar that was marrying me and my partner sent me an email about details for our wedding," said Froggatt, who has nabbed one of the show's 27 Emmy nominations, the most ever for a non-American series. "At the bottom of the email he wrote, 'If Jo could fix it for me and my wife to go to the Downton house, she'll go straight to heaven.'"

ess, said she was amazed to hear people gossiping about the show in countries like Thailand and Cambodia. She thinks its popularity has much to do with how creator Julian Fellowes keeps the pace at a rapid clip.

"What he's done so brilliantly is provide 15 characters with just the right amount of time on-screen," she said. "It really fits in with this generation's Internet tolerance for emotional knowledge." Fellowes backs up MacLaine's analysis by nicknaming his approach as "attention-deficit TV."

When asked about inspiration, Fellowes doesn't name-drop "Upstairs, Downstairs" or "Brideshead Revisited." Instead, he mentions "West Wing" and "ER," two dramas packed with stories and characters.

"The fun is that it sort of looks like a classical period drama from the '70s where everyone's bustling in and out and ringing for lunch, but the energy is much more modern," Fellowes said. "It's like American television series with all these plots going on, big plots, little plots, funny plots, sad plots, all plotted up together. It seems to meet what the audience wants."

Weeknight risotto

■ Healthier version just as thick, creamy

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press

I'm always searching for ways to make a healthier version of risotto, one of my favorite winter Italian dishes.

Risotto traditionally is made with starchy white rice. That starch is essential to producing a creamy, thick risotto. But I wanted a whole-grain version. Trouble is, brown rice doesn't release nearly as much starch during cooking, so substituting it often produces risotto that is thin and uninspiring.

It took me a few attempts, but I eventually figured out how to have my whole grains and my thick and creamy risotto. And it was simple. I just needed to add starch.

Once I had that down, then I needed to add flavor. For this recipe, I came up with two variations, one with Brussels sprouts and apple, another with asparagus and tomatoes. Both are incredibly delicious.

CREAMY BROWN RICE RISOTTO

Start to finish: 40 minutes (20 minutes active)
Servings: 4

INGREDIENTS

- 1 cup short grain brown rice
  - 2 cups water
  - 1/2 tablespoon olive oil
  - 3 ounces prosciutto, chopped
  - 1 tablespoon minced fresh rosemary
  - 1 medium yellow onion, finely diced
  - 1 pound Brussels sprouts, quartered AND 1 firm tart apple, peeled and diced
- OR
- 1 pound asparagus, trimmed and cut into 2-inch pieces AND 1/2 cup oil-packed sliced sun-dried tomatoes (drained)
  - 1/2 cup white wine
  - 1 1/2 cups low-sodium chicken broth, room temperature
  - 1/2 tablespoon cornstarch mixed with 1 tablespoon water

1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
Purchased balsamic glaze, to serve

DIRECTIONS

- 1 In a medium saucepan over medium-high heat, combine the rice and water. Bring to a boil, then cover, reduce heat to simmer and cook for 20 minutes.
- 2 Remove the pan from the heat, leaving it covered. The rice will not be completely cooked and there will be some water in the pan. Set aside.
- 3 In a large skillet over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the prosciutto and cook until crisp. Use a spoon to transfer the prosciutto to a plate and set aside. Do not wipe out the skillet. Return the pan to the stovetop over medium-high heat and add the rosemary and onion. Saute until starting to brown, about 4 to 5 minutes.
- 4 Add the Brussels sprouts and apple OR the asparagus and sun-dried tomatoes. Cook for about 5 minutes, then add the wine and stir vigorously for 1 to 2 minutes to deglaze the pan. Add the rice and any liquid in the pan. Add the chicken broth and stir well. Bring to a simmer and cook, stirring frequently to prevent sticking, until the liquid has thickened and reduced, about 10 minutes. Stir in the cornstarch mixture, then cook for another minute.

- 5 Stir in the cheese until melted. Season with salt and pepper. Top with crisped prosciutto, then drizzle with balsamic glaze just before serving.

Recipe combines toasty couscous, delicata squash

SCRIPPS HOWARD NEWS SERVICE

Delicata squash makes Whole Wheat M'Hamsa Couscous Salad even better.

By Gretchen McKay
Scripps Newspapers

Couscous is a great alternative to pasta because it cooks so quickly. This recipe was inspired by a dish I saw on the menu at Le Pain Quotidien, a bakery/restaurant chain. It's made with M'hamsa couscous, a hand-rolled sun-dried couscous from Tunisia that has an especially toasty flavor. You could, however, substitute any brand.

I like delicata squash because its skin is edible, but this dish would be just as terrific made with roasted butternut squash.

COUSCOUS

INGREDIENTS

- 1 delicata squash
- 5 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 1/2 cups water or broth
- 1 cup M'hamsa couscous
- 1/4 cup chopped sun-dried tomatoes in oil
- 3 scallions, chopped
- 2 to 3 sprigs fresh parsley, minced
- 1/3 cup minced fresh mint leaves
- Juice 1 lemon
- Salt and pepper
- Feta cheese for garnish (about 1/3 cup)

DIRECTIONS

- 1 Preheat oven to 425 degrees.
- 2 With a sharp knife, cut delicata in half lengthwise. (Don't worry about peeling; the skin is edible.) Scoop out the seeds. Cut each half into 1/2-inch segments, creating moon-shaped pieces that have slight bumps around the curve.
- Arrange pieces in a single 3 layer in a metal baking pan and coat with 2 tablespoons olive oil. Salt gently. Place in oven and roast 10 minutes. Using a spatula, turn the squash in the pan so that the light sides are now touching the pan and the brown sides are facing up.
- 4 Continue roasting, turning every 7 to 10 minutes until both sides of the squash pieces are golden, about 25 to 30 minutes.
- 5 Meanwhile, bring water or broth to a boil over high heat. Add couscous, stir, cover and return to boil. Turn off heat and let the couscous rest for 7 to 10 minutes, then fluff with fork.
- 6 Toss couscous with remaining olive oil, sun-dried tomatoes, scallions and parsley and mint. Add lemon juice and roasted squash, and toss again. Season to taste with salt and pepper, and top with feta.
- 7 Serves 2 to 3 as a main dish, or 5 to 6 as a side dish.

Spice up your mealtime with healthier, more flavorful dishes

Feel like spicing up your palate for the new year while you're making some healthy changes in your food consumption?

Some food lovers think this can be accomplished by making healthier meals at home with the help of flavorful herbs and spices.

The concept even has a name: Generation Fresh. Here are a couple of recipes from McCormick that incorporate bold flavors and spices with some familiar and hearty wintertime dishes.

WINTER VEGETABLES

Makes 6 servings
Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 35 minutes

INGREDIENTS

- 4 cups cubed winter vegetables (cut into 1/2-inch pieces), such as carrots, butternut squash, parsnips or sweet potatoes
- 1 medium onion, cut into

- 2 1/2-inch pieces tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 1/2 pounds boneless beef sirloin steak, cut into 1-inch cubes
- 3/4 cup chicken broth
- 3 bay leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon thyme leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon coarse ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup dry red wine or apple juice
- 3 cups prepared mashed potatoes

DIRECTIONS

- 1 Preheat oven to 425 degrees. Toss vegetables and onion with 1 tablespoon olive oil on large baking sheet. Roast 20 minutes or until vegetables are golden.

- 2 Meanwhile, cook and stir beef in remaining 1 tablespoon olive oil in large skillet on medium-high heat 5 minutes or until beef is browned. Add roasted vegetables, chicken broth, bay leaves, thyme, pepper, salt and wine. Bring to boil. Reduce heat to low; simmer 10 minutes or until sauce is slightly thickened. Remove bay leaves from stew before serving. Serve stew over mashed potatoes.

TUSCAN PASTA

Makes 6 servings
Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 25 minutes

INGREDIENTS

- 1 can (28 ounces) diced tomatoes, undrained

- 1 can (8 ounces) tomato sauce
- 1 tablespoon sugar (optional)
- 2 teaspoons garlic powder
- 2 teaspoons Italian seasoning
- 1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 pound zucchini and/or yellow squash, sliced
- 1 package (8 ounces) sliced mushrooms
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 6 ounces pasta, such as spaghetti or linguine
- Shredded Parmesan cheese (optional)

DIRECTIONS

- 1 Mix tomatoes, tomato sauce, sugar and season-

- ings in medium saucepan. Bring to boil on medium heat. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer 20 minutes.
- 2 Heat oil in large skillet on medium-high heat. Add zucchini, mushrooms and onion; cook and stir 4 minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp. Stir tomato sauce into vegetables.
- 3 Meanwhile, cook pasta as directed on package. Drain well. Place pasta in serving bowl. Add vegetable mixture; toss well. Sprinkle with shredded Parmesan cheese, if desired.

ON THE TABLE, TOO

To help keep weight off, be mindful of eating habits

One of the most common New Year's resolutions we make is to lose weight.

Eating the correct portions of nutritious foods and engaging in physical activity are two keys to successful weight loss. One way that may help you keep your portions under control is to be mindful of what you eat.

Mindful eating means you eat slowly and enjoy your food with all your senses. When you are more mindful of what you eat, you may become more aware of when you become full, which prevents overeating.

In our society, everything is rushed, including meals. When we eat too fast our body doesn't have enough time to send signals to the brain to tell us that we are full. It takes 20 minutes for food to reach the first part of the small intestine after it's ingested.

AMANDA HARDY
COLUMNIST

At this point, our bodies send the "full" signals to the brain to stop eating.

People who eat mindlessly are more likely to overeat and gain weight. They also tend to enjoy their food less because they don't take time to experience its flavors and textures.

Some examples of mindless eating include those who eat because there's food on their plates, those who eat while working on the computer or watching television, and those who are so hungry at mealtimes that they gobble down their food, not realizing they are full.

In many countries, mindful eating is ingrained into the culture. Many Japanese practice Hara Hachi Bu, which involves eating only until they are 80 percent full. This requires that they pay attention to their body and stop eating when they are almost full.

The more food you eat, the more your stomach will stretch. Stomach stretching can enlarge the stomach overtime and make you less aware of when you are actually full. Practicing Hara Hachi Bu prevents overeating and helps them maintain a healthy weight.

In France, many people set aside two hours for dinner, which is the largest meal of the day. They see dinner as an opportunity to leisurely eat, enjoy their food and spend time with family and friends.

A typical dinner consists of six courses. While this may sound like a lot of food, their portion sizes are 25 percent smaller than typical American sizes. They also have smaller snack and beverage sizes.

An important aspect of mindful eating is selecting foods that your body needs for good health.

For example, fill half your plate with a variety of colorful fruits and vegetables. Remember, a colorful plate means a greater variety of nutrients. Fill one quarter of your plate with whole grains, and complete your plate with a small amount of protein.

Remember to include a low-fat or fat-free milk or a dairy product or milk alternative if you cannot tolerate dairy.

Here are some tips to help you become a mindful eater:

1. Don't let the clock dictate what time you eat. Eat only when you're hungry, but make sure you eat before you get too hungry. Being famished can cause overeating.

2. Create a nice environment for dinner.

3. Try not to eat in front of the television and eliminate other distractions.

4. Have meals with your family.

5. Enjoy the aroma and colors of your food and be thankful you have food to eat.

6. Take small bites and chew properly.

7. Use smaller plates.

8. Follow MyPlate guidelines to make sure you're getting the nutrition you need.

Light, steamed fish can have big, bold flavors

By Sara Moulton
Associated Press

The first time I had to test a recipe for steamed fish was back in the '80s, when I was working in the test kitchen at Gourmet magazine. And truthfully, the very idea seemed preposterous.

Steaming anything over water had always struck me as boring. And the idea that you could count on a good result by applying such an intense method to a protein as delicate as fish seemed highly unlikely.

But the recipe in question relied on the Chinese method of steaming fish, and I became a believer the very first time I tried it. As is typical in Chinese cuisine, the secret is in the seasoning.

Given their blandness, fish are a wonderful canvas for intense ingredients such as ginger, chilies and toasted sesame oil. Steaming them concentrates and amplifies their flavors. And an added bonus is that steaming requires very little fat.

This recipe works wonderfully using any thin fillet of fish, including char, catfish, trout and striped bass.

And if you increase the cooking time, you can swap in any number of thicker fillets, including cod, sablefish and halibut.

How do you know when the fish is cooked? Stick a knife through it. If it goes through easily, it's done.

For this recipe I chose tilapia because it is a sustainably raised farmed fish. I prefer American-raised, as the quality is much higher than imported.

Ideally, you'd cook this fish in a Chinese bamboo steamer. But if you don't have one of those, you can use a collapsible metal steamer lined with foil. I love those steamer baskets. They are great for steaming vegetables as well as meat, fit into most saucepans, store easily and are virtually indestructible. I'm still using one I bought during my college days.

This recipe is quick, healthy and delicious. You might want to think of it as a jumping-off point for other steamed fish dishes.

In fact, if — like most of us — you're recovering from a month or two of holiday overindulgence, this little gem could enter your regular rotation as a lighter dish for the new year.

CHINESE-STYLE STEAMED TILAPIA

Start to finish: 40 minutes (10 minutes active)
Servings: 4

INGREDIENTS

- 5 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce, divided

- 2 tablespoons sake or dry sherry
1 tablespoon finely grated fresh ginger
3 teaspoons toasted sesame oil, divided
1 teaspoon cornstarch
1¼ pounds tilapia fillets, cut into 4 portions
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
¼ pound fresh shiitake mushrooms, stems removed, caps thinly sliced
3 scallions (white and light green parts), thinly sliced (about ½ cup) ½ large jalapeño chili or 1 serrano chili, very thinly sliced crosswise

DIRECTIONS

- 1 In a small bowl, whisk together 3 tablespoons of the soy sauce, the sake or sherry, ginger, 2 teaspoons of the sesame oil and the cornstarch. Transfer the mixture to a zip-close plastic bag, add the tilapia, then shake to coat the fish with the marinade. Refrigerate for 20 to 30 minutes.
2 Fill a medium saucepan with about 1 inch of water. Fit the pan with a steamer basket, then line the basket with foil. Coat the foil with cooking spray. Bring the water to a boil.
3 Remove the fillets from the bag, then arrange them on the foil, folding if necessary to make them fit. Pour the marinade over the fish. Cover and steam the fish for 3 to 6 minutes, or until just cooked through.

- 4 Meanwhile, in a medium skillet over high, heat the vegetable oil until hot. Reduce the heat to medium, add the mushrooms and cook, stirring occasionally, until just tender, 3 to 5 minutes. Add the scallions and chili and cook for another minute. Stir in the remaining 2 tablespoons of soy sauce and 1 teaspoon of sesame oil. Transfer the fillets to plates and spoon the mushroom mixture over them. Serve immediately.

Urban chickens, craft beers expected to be popular in '13

By KIM ODE
Scripps Newspapers

Trend spotter Marian Salzman reveals five food trends in her new book, "What's Next? What to Expect in 2013," with more than 150 predictions in 30 categories. She has her eye on:

■ The hobby of raising urban chickens continues to grow, inspiring architects to create designer coops. Laws are playing catch-up regarding population density, noise levels and poultry's perfume. Almost always voted off the farm? The crowing rooster.

■ Beer sales never wavered during the recession, and craft-beer brewers in ever-growing numbers are moving the old mass-market dinosaurs to the back of the cooler.

■ Recycling gets easier. PepsiCo wants to boost U.S. recycling rates to 50 percent by 2018 through any of the thousands of automated kiosks in its Dream Machine initiative. Subway now uses salad bowls and lids made from 95 percent post-consumer recycled materials, annually saving 2.6 million pounds of plastic from landfills.

■ Spices in your life
McCormick offers its flavor combos geared for the new year. On tap:

■ Sweet basil, bitter chocolate and passion fruit — an "indulgent combo" that pairs well with meats.

■ Allspice, charred orange and black rum — a "sultry collision" directed toward desserts.

■ Sage, molasses and cider — "rustic and comforting" in both sweet and savory dishes.

■ Rosemary, chili peppers, sweet onion and smoked tomato — for handcrafted ketchups and jams.

■ Clove, blackberry and farro grain — surprisingly, in a salad.

■ Coriander, cumin, sesame and nuts — the resulting mix known as dukkah will be everywhere.

■ Cinnamon and plantain — teaming up with hearty cuts of meat.

■ Paprika, hazelnut and artichoke — the suggested pairing is steamed mussels.

Rite Aid promotional program provides money-saving rewards

Q: I've been trying to figure out how to take advantage of the special promotions that Rite Aid offers, but it looks like it has made a lot of changes to the program. Can you explain how it works?

A: Rite Aid offers great savings and benefits through several programs. The first to check out is the "+Up Rewards" program. Similar to programs at CVS and Walgreens, +Up Rewards offers you the ability to save money on your next visit by purchasing certain products.

A type of in-store coupon, these rewards are added directly to your "wellness+" card through Load2Card right when you earn them. You can also opt out of Load2Card and have +Up Rewards print out at the bottom of your receipt.

Managing your rewards is easy — simply log in to your wellness+ account on your smartphone or computer. Keep in mind that +Up Rewards expire two weeks after issued. So watch your dates and enjoy your savings!

KASEY TRENUM

Rite Aid also offers additional opportunities to save through "Video Values." Video Values are Rite Aid store coupons that are added to your wellness+ card after you watch a short video. They can be stacked with MFR coupons and can be found on the Rite Aid website.

You can rack up significant savings by taking advantage of this additional savings opportunity. Make sure to check back often, as new offers are added monthly.

This year Rite Aid is reinventing the way it approached the +Up Rewards program, and I have to say that it is impressive with three member tiers. Not only will customers receive one point for every dollar spent at Rite Aid, but also 25 points for every prescription purchase. As your points accumulate, you earn additional rewards that load directly to your wellness+ card.

Reach 500 points and get your choice of one wellness reward such as a gym membership, magazine subscription or health screening.

Then, when you hit 1,000 points, you will receive 20 percent off every Rite Aid purchase you make for the next year.

That means if you were to fill four prescriptions a month at Rite Aid, in 10 months you would have earned your family a year-long 20 percent discount. Those kinds of savings add up quickly.

Advice

Devastated dad should try one more time to reconcile

Dear Amy: Many years ago my family lived in a communist country. My wife and I faced many challenges to come to the United States.

After coming here, our main goal was the well-being of our daughter. She got a college degree and is now a successful professional, married and with a daughter of her own.

My wife died 25 years ago. I live alone on the West Coast. My daughter lives in the Northeast.

After I retired, like millions of elderly people I wanted to relocate close to my only child and grandchild. I don't need financial help; my only desire is to see them at least once a month.

Unfortunately, my daughter does not want me to live close to her or even to visit them (I told her that I will stay in a hotel) because my presence "makes her nervous."

I asked many times what are the things she does not like and expressed readiness to correct my behavior. No answer from her.

AMY DICKINSON

I have never interfered in her life. She wrote that she is grateful to me for what I did raising her and that she loves me (but does not want to see me). I am devastated. What should I do?

— Lonely

Dear Lonely: In a way, your daughter has chosen exile from her home; there may be something about this impulse that you understand (more than you realize).

If you want to visit her, then you should plan a trip to her area and let her know several days ahead of time that you will be in town and would like to see her.

This would take some bravery on your part, but I do believe that even if this does not result in a reconciliation, you would feel better knowing that you tried. Give her the opportunity to express herself and be open to talking, even if you don't like what you hear.

Beyond that, you should do your utmost to build a life for yourself wherever you want to live.

Make an effort to join organizations, develop friendships with people your own age and reach out to people from your home country who live in the States (if you would feel comfortable).

Dear Amy: I'm responding to the issue of texting while at a social gathering. The reason this is rude is because of the message it conveys: "Your gathering isn't worthy of my whole attention."

The host is expending effort and expense to stage a worthwhile event, and the gracious guest should convey (in word and deed) that there is no place he or she would rather be.

What should a host do when a guest is sitting on the sofa texting?

Option one is ignore it but also never invite the person back. Option two is to attempt to draw the guest into conversation with others.

Option three is to sidle up to the guest and say, "I'm sorry you aren't able to be here for the party." If the guest doesn't correct his or her behavior, do not invite the person back.

The most important gift a guest can give a host is his or her genuine presence. That is what the guest is agreeing to provide when the invitation is accepted.

— Present and Accountable

Dear Present: I absolutely agree. Thank you.

Dear Amy: I am responding to your answer to "PO'd Husband," who wrote concerning his wife not being able to resist the candies in her sightline at work.

I think your response was wrong and insensitive. There is research about food as an addiction, some of it done at Yale, where it has been found that flour and sugar are as addictive as alcohol and drugs.

I would have hoped you would know this and given a more "medical" and appropriate response.

— Lisa

Dear Lisa: Unlike alcohol and drugs, which are not necessary for human consumption, each of us has to struggle to control ourselves around the various "addictive" foods we encounter, because we all have to eat in order to live.

I don't believe in legislating against every conceivable personal choice in the workplace.

Horoscope

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Jan. 13). Not only do you get what you need this year, but you attain it with style. In February, community groups bring business contacts and feed romance. You may disagree with loved ones in March, but your love is unconditional. Your open mind allows for many moments of deep feeling and beauty. Aries and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 5, 39, 1, 2 and 24.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You're starting to see that there is no fast way to get there or mysterious process you need to go through. You are willing to work for what you want and so you'll eventually have it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). You go respectfully into different territory, realizing that the scene was set long before you arrived on it and that it will probably go on long after you leave too.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). Managing what you own isn't easy. One Gemini said, "A man builds a fine house; and now he has a master, and a task for life; he is to furnish, watch, show it, and keep it in repair the rest of his days." — Ralph Waldo Emerson

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Considering that those who do the opposite of what they believe find it extremely difficult to be happy, or even restless, one way to be happy is simply to do what you believe.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). You wish that you could control your thinking, but to some extent it's too much to ask of yourself right now. The best you can do is be aware of the thoughts drifting through and single out the pleasant ones for further examination.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Just as soon as you think you're certain about something, another possibility will emerge to challenge that certainty. So stay open, trusting that you'll manage whatever comes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). You've recently set some ambitious goals. Today you'll be in just the clearheaded mood to organize your efforts, prioritize your responsibilities and make a plan.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). In some religions, the lotus flower is a simple of non-attachment to the material world. Focusing on this symbol will help you rise above the issue that's been bothering you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). If the walls of your kitchen could talk, what would they say? The secrets they know about your eating patterns are a window into how well you're taking care of yourself these days.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Youth is a gift. Immaturity is a choice. A bit of silly fun will be the perfect remedy for a relationship teetering on dullness. Your charm is amplified by the element of surprise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). While some chase after fame and fortune, you're not so sure you want to be noticed for all you do. There's something to be said for wanting to learn in private and make your mistakes quietly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Creating is easy for you, but maintaining all of those creations is a lot trickier. You'll love the challenge of it now. There's much to order, store, give and throw away.

Dish detergent, microfiber cloth should cut stain

Dear Heloise: I have some everyday silverware that looks stained. Every morning, I drink my coffee and add creamer with a spoon.

I then set the spoon down and enjoy my cup of joe. When the silverware comes out of the dishwasher, there is a circular stain. What can I do?

— Cathy S. in Texas

Dear Cathy: The stain probably is the fat that's in the creamer. Here's what was tested in Heloise Central: A little dish soap on a microfiber cloth (rubbing the stain) did the trick!

If that does not work, mix a little baking soda and dish soap to make a paste, and rub-a-dub-dub! The baking soda won't scratch as long as it's wet.

To prevent the stained spoon, rinse under water or keep a small cup of water by the pot to dip the spoon into after use.

— Heloise

Dear Heloise: I recently attended the wedding of a longtime friend. I bought a nice card and placed some cash in it for the couple. I did not seal the envelope; I just tucked in the flap.

The card went straight from my purse into the card box at the wedding. I found out that by the time the card got to the couple, the cash was gone.

I searched my purse, and the conclusion I came to is that someone took the cash because the card was not sealed. Lesson learned.

God is real, wants what is best for you

Dear Dr. Graham: I don't feel any need for God. I live by my own set of rules — things like respect for others, selflessness, concern for the environment, honesty, and so forth — and that's all I need. Why should I bother with God?

— J.E.

Dear J.E.: I'm thankful you want to live by these principles; our world would be better off if more people followed moral principles like this. Unfortunately, many people who reject God don't live this way.

However, I strongly urge you to reconsider your decision to leave God out of your life. For one thing, even if you don't believe in God, He is still real, and He loves you and knows what is best for you.

God made us, and our lives are incomplete without Him. Even if you deny it, down inside you'll always wonder if something is missing from your life. And you'll be right; something will be missing — and that "something" is God.

BILLY GRAHAM

After all, you aren't just a body and a mind; you also have a soul or spirit that God put within you. He put it there so you could know Him as your friend, and life's greatest joy comes from personally knowing Him and walking with Him every day.

Why leave Him out of your life? And why face eternity without Him?

The Bible says, "My soul yearns for you in the night; in the morning my spirit longs for you" (Isaiah 26:9).

Have you ever asked yourself what it is that keeps you from God? Is it a desire to run your own life?

Or are you just unwilling to turn from a particular sin that has a hold over you?

Whatever the reason, I urge you to turn to Jesus Christ and make Him the center of your life. You'll never regret it.

Certain foods, caffeine often trigger irritable bowel problems

Dear Dr. Roach: I have been diagnosed with irritable bowel syndrome. However, the only time I am affected with multiple bowel movements, cramps and loose, watery stools is after breakfast and lunch.

Do you have any ideas of why this could happen at these two meals only? I did not have any problems until after the removal of my gallbladder.

I am afraid to travel now because of my condition. What is your opinion regarding being affected with IBS only after breakfast and lunch, and can you provide more information about possible treatment or cures? — R.G.

Dear R.G.: Irritable bowel syndrome is a common condition that encompasses one or more of the following characteristics: abdominal discomfort, usually cramping or fullness, often relieved by bowel movements; stool changes, constipation, loose bowel movements or alternating between. It affects more women than men.

DR. ROACH

IBS can be debilitating, and a large number of people with this condition limit their social activities because of symptoms or fear of symptoms. There is no cure for IBS, but most people can find relief with treatment.

Treatment includes dietary changes, medications and stress management. IBS does not cause permanent damage to the intestines and does not increase cancer risk.

Dietary changes are tricky, because what works for one person may make someone else worse. For example, fiber helps many people with constipation symptoms, but may worsen people who have fullness and bloating.

Broccoli and onions are frequent triggers, as is caffeine. Keeping a food diary and a symptom diary can be helpful in tracking down whether foods are a big trigger.

In your case, I would concern yourself with the foods you've eaten during breakfast and lunch, especially caffeine. However, since stress can make a big impact on symptoms, I wonder if work stress may be part of your issue.

Also, I have had a few patients who developed IBS symptoms after gallbladder removal, and the use of the prescription medication cholestyramine, which binds bile acids (formerly kept in the now-removed gallbladder), occasionally has been life-changing.

Having a talk with an expert in this, usually a

Dear Readers: The booklet on colon cancer provides useful information on the causes and cures of this common malady. Readers can obtain a copy by writing: Dr. Roach — No. 505, Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475. Enclose a check or money order (no cash) for $4.75 with the recipient's printed name and address. Please allow four weeks for delivery.

Dear Dr. Roach: In the past couple of years, I have experienced a small degree of hair loss during the winter and wondered what it portends for the future.

I find, however, that growth restores again during the rest of the year. I have read that this may be due to the flu vaccine. Can you expand on this matter? — A.R.

Dear A.R.: There have been a few cases of documented hair loss after vaccination, usually the hepatitis B vaccine. However, there have been even more cases associating with influenza (the flu) and hair loss.

In my opinion, the likelihood that this is due to vaccines is very small, and the overall benefit of influenza vaccine is greater than the risks.

There are other reasons people have published for winter hair loss, including dryness, hat wearing and hormonal changes. It's not clear what causes it, but don't skip the flu vaccine due to fears of hair loss.

Young mother finally learns to appreciate her morning cup of coffee

"No one can understand the truth until he drinks of coffee's frothy goodness." — Sheik Abdal-Kadir

By Heather Humrichouse
"Chicken Soup for the Soul"

When I married Mike, I knew he came into the marriage a full-fledged CA (coffee addict). It didn't bother me.

I liked the smell of coffee and the yummy scents that came from the kitchen when he brought home specialty coffee beans like Kona and flavors like Irish cream, creme brulee, English toffee and amaretto.

And yet, I had no desire to try it.

My husband offered me a cup every day with a smile on his face, claiming he'd wear me down eventually.

My friends even tried to talk me into trying it. "I love having Maxwell House moments with my husband," one confided.

I rolled my eyes. Then Samuel James was born and life took a dramatic turn. Now the mother of two little ones, and far from family, I was exhausted.

My husband's new job had him leaving at the crack of dawn, and after several sleepless nights, I could barely function.

One morning, I stumbled downstairs and spotted the coffee pot still glowing, with one cup of coffee still warm.

A moment after I took my first sip, it hit my bloodstream. My eyes opened wider, I walked faster, I smiled bigger and it felt great.

From that day on, I started drinking coffee in the morning, claiming that it was just to help me function after sleepless nights. The afternoon espresso was a little harder to explain.

Five months later, Sam was sleeping through the night. I was getting eight hours of sleep and still craving coffee in the morning. My husband smiled knowingly. "You like the stuff now, don't you?"

"All right," I cried. "Fine. I love the sheer variety of options — the syrups, the decaf, half-caf, the so-caffeinated-that-my-eyes-don't-blink-for-a-week, the lattes, the cappuccinos, iced, tall, grande!

"I love the Styrofoam cups with the sippy lids so I don't spill. I love that coffee and chatting go together so well! And fine! Maxwell House moments do exist and they are wonderful. I love wrapping my fingers around a big, beautiful ceramic mug and the warmth it brings me."

"And when I've had a really bad day, I can sneak a bit of whipped cream and chocolate syrup into my coffee, and no one's the wiser."

I think my husband was a bit surprised. I think he was more surprised when, a couple of weeks later when Sam was sick, I told him that I believed a person couldn't truly appreciate the blessing of coffee until they'd been sleep-deprived at least once. So I gave him the wonderful gift of being on night duty with Sam.

He didn't exactly thank me, but I think he did appreciate his coffee (and me) a lot more the next day. And that's all the thanks I need.

past Monday were able to see two adult birds without ever leaving the dock. One was perched in a tree opposite the marina and the other was perched in a tree below the lodge.

Naturalist Schmidt explains why that is.

Eagles, who primarily hunt fish though they have been known to “snack” on the bird species American coot that is abundant in the western waterways, like to be near a water source. When lakes and water sources freeze farther north in winter time, the eagles “snowbird” south looking for better hunting conditions.

Since Kentucky Lake covers 160,000 surface acres and is one of the largest bodies of water in this area, it only makes sense that the bald eagle would move in beside the resident eagles that have also gotten established in the area and settle in to do a little fishing. If they're successful and content, they may make Kentucky Lake their winter vacation spot year after year.

And that's why the Eagle Watch Weekends are offered in January and February at the Kentucky state parks.

There's a larger eagle population to see (the number triples, if not more, Schmidt said), bare trees make the finding and viewing of eagles easier and the nesting season provides some interesting behavior, including “courtship dances” in flight and nest building. There are 25 nesting pairs in the area year-round, she said, and about 350 resident bald eagles.

So how do you spot a bald eagle, according to Schmidt?

Since they have a wing span of 6 to 7 feet, it shouldn't be too difficult.

But you can also look for that football-shaped body and the bright white heads and tail feathers on mature birds. Juvenile birds are a little bit harder to spot and can camouflage themselves better.

They like to park about two-thirds of the way up a tree and near the shore line.

Brent McCarty of the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources said there was a “high success rate” with eagle fledglings in 2011. He said 81 bald eagles hatched and fledged in Kentucky and it was the highest number in many years.

“Right now we have more bald eagles in Kentucky than any other time in history,” he said. “They really like these bodies of water, and that's why we're seeing more right now.”

“We've got a real resource here in Kentucky,” said Parks Commissioner Elaine Walker, who was along for the bird-watching tour. “There are few things as amazing as seeing the majestic bald eagle in flight or seeing it in a nest.”

She said being able to take a tour with naturalists makes it just all that much better since they are able to offer plenty of viewing tips and educational information.

INFORMATION
from 1C

The numbers for the park lodges are:

■ Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park, 800-325-0146; yacht tours and van tours to Ballard Wildlife Management Area available.

■ Lake Barkley State Resort Park, 800-325-1708; yacht tours and van tours to Land Between the Lakes available.

■ Kenlake State Resort Park, 800-325-0143; yacht tours only.

■ Registration is required for the Eagle Watch Weekends. Call the parks for registration, details and fee information or visit www.parks.ky.gov and click on the winter adventure tab, or call 800-255-7275.

Also, any group or organization interested in a special cruise on the CQ Princess can call Karen Faughn at Kentucky Dam Village State Resort Park.

There are other opportunities to observe wildlife this winter at Kentucky state parks:

■ A “Nature Watch Weekend — Sandhill Cranes” will be hosted by Barren River Lake State Resort Park on Jan. 25-27 and Feb. 8-10. Each year, thousands of sandhill cranes stop at Barren River lake as they migrate through the area.

Tour options include a Saturday Sunrise tour, a Saturday Sunset tour or a Sunday Sunrise guided van trip to the roosting site and area cornfields.

The cost is $30 per adult and $18 for ages 8 to 12, which includes an educational session (led by Wildlife Biologist Wayne Tamminga of the Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources), box lunch, guided tour and T-shirt.

For information on how to participate, call 800-325-0057.

■ Elk Tours are being offered at both Jenny Wiley State Resort Park (Prestonsburg) and Buckhorn Lake State Resort Park (Buckhorn) through mid-March.

Dates at Jenny Wiley are Jan. 19-20, Jan. 26-27, Feb. 2, Feb. 9, Feb. 16, Feb. 23, March 2 and March 9.

Dates at Buckhorn are Jan. 26, Feb. 9, Feb. 23, March 9 and March 16.

Tours are by van and led by guides. For more information, visit parks.ky.gov.

Japanese maples accent garden built on rocks

Couple takes love of nature to a new, beautiful extreme

By Debbie Arrington

GRASS VALLEY, Calif. — Working with wildlife for most of their lives, Vivian Kee and Lou Merzario wouldn't feel at home without it.

Perched on a hillside, their house feels like part of nature. Birds of every feather dine at feeders and splash in shallow pools. A flock of wild turkeys struts through the property without fear. Black-tailed deer are frequent visitors along with jack rabbits, squirrels and other creatures.

But except for the big trees, little of this foothill haven is as they found it. With a lot of muscle (and a motorized wheelbarrow), Kee and Merzario turned a barren, red-dirt slope into a peaceful forest sanctuary, framed by massive boulders and studded with Japanese maples.

“I lived in the southeast, Alaskan rain forest for 20 years,” Kee said. “It inspired this lush, layered look of landscaping.”

Under a canopy of black oaks, a 15-foot waterfall cascades down stone walls into a large pond, fringed with Japanese forest grass. Carefully placed branches allow lizards to cross the streaming water. Basking rocks invite frogs to relax and lunch on bugs.

Nearby, water bubbles in a grotto fountain surrounded by hand-hewn pumice walls. Another fountain beckons visitors to an Asian garden room, screened from the street below. A sweeping deck provides views of the hills and surrounding foothill forest.

Said Kee: “Our outdoor deck is larger than the whole house. That shows our priorities.”

As a botanist, biologist and ranger, Kee retired after 32 years in the U.S. Forest Service.

Merzario, now an engineering consultant, also spent much of his career taking care of nature. They originally met in 1984 while working at Alaska's Admiralty Island National Monument, where Kee was stationed for two decades. They became reacquainted after Kee transferred to Northern California. They married eight years ago and settled in Grass Valley.

The couple wanted a foothill home that allowed them to stay close to nature. Their 1.67-acre parcel sits across the road from a creek. But the home's original landscaping — or lack of it — left a lot to be desired.

About 17,000 pounds of rock became the foundation for hillside terraces and water features. The soil is held in place with geo-webbing and rebar.

With a background in pool installation, Merzario used rebar-reinforced gunite to stabilize water features and set the stones in place.

“We moved all that rock ourselves,” Merzario said, “plus 140 bags of soil. This garden is more Vivian's vision, more my brawn. She has the artistic sense.”

Both avid gardeners, the couple needed space to plant. The terraces are packed with rhododendrons, camellias, carpet roses, lavender, sages, evergreens, nandina and other plants that can withstand the cold as well as nibbling by wildlife.

“In the foothills, flat gardening space is at a premium,” Kee said. “So you have to create it.”

With patience, they crafted a series of garden rooms and patios, stair-stepping up the hillside and joined by flowing water.

Softening the edges of her landscape are many Japanese maples.

This side garden at the Kee-Merzario home has an Asian theme, with a water feature and two Japanese maples.

she said. “Lou and I both have a passion for them, along with rhododendrons. The oak canopy allows us to have them.”

The foothill setting is ideal for the little maples, which grow under the shade of larger trees.

The one thing Japanese maples don't like — hot, dry wind. Said Kee, “In those conditions, they're toast.”

The couple lovingly care for the maples.

“We keep them trimmed so the light can come through the leaves,” Merzario said. “The scarlet leaves are simply stunning when they're backlit.”

“In spring and fall, our garden has a layered look of red and green,” Kee said. “It's a beautiful effect.”

Retirement has allowed her to devote full time to the garden, she noted. Now, she has a little time to relax in her paradise, too.

“I love the serenity,” Kee said. “I tell Lou, ‘This is our vacation destination — our Fiji or Bora Bora.’ You don't want to leave.”

■ Chamber-NWKF merger talk triggers major case of déjà vu

The past half-century of economic development in Henderson has featured ups and downs — occasional periods of impressive growth interspersed with hand-wringing dry spells.

But it's been nearly a decade since Columbia Sportswear announced it would open a distribution center here, arguably the last headline-grabbing announcement of a new industry here.

Now, in hopes of reigniting momentum, local officials and business leaders have begun discussions of a possible merger of the Northwest Kentucky Forward regional economic development organization with the Henderson Chamber of Commerce. Any decision is likely months or longer down the road.

Whatever happens, this isn't the first time Henderson has pursued changes to how it attracts new industry and jobs.

Back in October 1960, Hendersonian Charlie Davis, then Tri-state editor of the Evansville Sunday Courier & Press, wrote about the "plight of Henderson regarding attracting industry." There was, at the time, no full-time local industrial development agent or agency, nor would there be for many years.

But a step in that direction took place in 1960 with the formation of the Henderson-Henderson County Industrial Foundation Inc. Its organizers sought to sell shares at $500 apiece to stockholders in hopes of raising at least $125,000 to start buying sites to lure new industry.

The work by the Henderson-Henderson County Industrial Foundation to raise money to buy land helped recruit the Eaton Axle plant — seen here nearing completion on June 26, 1970 — to Henderson. A decade later, community leaders determined they needed more than land; they needed a full-time professional industrial development agent.

Money came slowly at first. But by February 1962, $144,500 had been pledged and PB&S Chemical owner Ray Preston was elected the foundation's chairman.

In 1963, the industrial foundation and Henderson Chamber of Commerce purchased 222 acres on the Ohio River for what became the U.S. 60-West industrial park. The next year, the city issued $325,000 in industrial revenue bonds to help Kusan expand. And that same year, city residents voted overwhelmingly, 4,403 to 841, to approve a $1.5 million municipal bond issue that helped recruit Technical Tape, a gift wrap plant, to town.

Industrial development picked up a little. Cresline Plastic Pipe opened its plant in 1966 on property that the industrial foundation acquired for industries on U.S. 41-South; that same year, local industrialist Bob Gibbs opened Gibbs Die Casting at the U.S. 60-West industrial park.

Still, as of 1966, the average manufacturing wage in Henderson County was only $89 per week — 22 percent less than the state average, according to chamber of commerce literature of the day.

The arrival in the early 1970s of a trio of heavy industries — Eaton Axle (now Dana Holding), Anacoda Aluminum (now Rio Tinto Alcan) and Firestone Steel (now Accuride) — over time brought higher wages, commercial development and suburban growth to Henderson.

And the late 1970s brought the development of the Henderson County Riverport and an adjacent industrial park with hopes of attracting companies that relied on river transportation.

But by the early 1980s, there was a sense that Henderson had stalled.

For several years, the community had been dealing with the expectation that three immense, federally subsidized chemical complexes that would convert coal to synthetic gas or liquid fuel would be constructed here.

That prospect had left the community more focused on how to cope with unprecedented growth — Could our highways handle the traffic? How many more schools must be built? — than on attracting other industries.

But those projects faded when President Ronald Reagan abandoned a national synthetic fuels program.

By 1981, nearly a decade had passed without the arrival of any major new industries. That year, community leaders began discussing the formation of a new agency led by a full-time industrial recruiter.

"We're going to pick up where we left off 20 years ago," businessman and former mayor Maurice Galloway, who chaired an ad hoc committee for economic development, declared at the time.

The industrial foundation, the chamber of commerce and the riverport were all valuable. "We just need to develop a united effort," Galloway said.

Backed by those entities along with city and county government, utility companies, banks and others — and using Paducah and Hopkinsville as models — the Henderson Economic Development Council was launched. In February 1983, its first executive director — Bill Johnson of Franklin, Ky. — was hired and moved into his office at the riverport.

But organizational change would come soon, and often. In October 1984, the EDC board approved a plan to merge with the Henderson-Audubon Area Chamber of Commerce, with Johnson serving as executive director of the combined organization. "We feel that once the merger is in place, we will probably have the best promotional aspect Henderson County has ever had," EDC board President John West declared.

However, the EDC and chamber retained their separate boards. And just two years later, in 1986, the two organizations split. "The jobs are so complex and so demanding that it's required now that each job have its own separate

Smart TVs get smarter, but just a little bit

■ Technology still in early phases of development

By Ryan Nakashima

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — In the not-so-distant future, couch potatoes will be waving, pointing, swiping and tapping to make their TVs react, kind of like what Tom Cruise did in the 2002 movie "Minority Report." That's the vision of TV manufacturers as they show off "smart TVs."

The sets will recognize who's watching and will try to guess what viewers want to see. They'll respond to more natural speech and will connect with your smartphone in a single touch.

The idea is to make TV watching easier and more pleasant as viewers are confronted with more and more choices — from the hundreds of live TV channels from the cable or satellite provider to online video services such as Netflix Inc., Hulu and Apple's iTunes. A traditional remote control that lets you flip through channels one at a time suddenly seems inadequate.

At a speech last week, Samsung President Boo-Keun Yoon said the company was developing "TVs that have the power to create the ultimate lean-back experience."

But don't worry about "Big Brother" looking back at you. Manufacturers such as Samsung Electronics Co. will allow motion-capturing cameras to be pointed away.

Gesture recognition still has a long ways to go, and in some demonstrations at this week's International CES show in Las Vegas, voice commands got lost in translation.

At a crowded Samsung booth, one attendant demonstrated how hand gestures were used to play simple kids' games. Raising her hand brought up an on-screen cursor. Grasping the air was equivalent to clicking on what her digital hand was hovering over.

However, when she tried the same gestures on a menu of TV-watching options, the TV didn't respond well. When she tried to give a kind of sideways wave — like Queen Elizabeth waving her supporters — the page didn't swipe to the left as it should have.

The technology appeared less responsive compared with the Xbox 360's Kinect motion-control system, which seems to do a much better job at swiping through menus.

Later, in a quiet, enclosed

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Infotech engineer Dick Seidl examines a display of large screen LED Ultra HD televisions at the Hisense booth at the Consumer Electronics Show last week in Las Vegas.

Samsung booth, the TV struggled to comprehend voice commands. The TV was asked, "find me a movie with Tom Cruise," and correctly pulled up an online trailer of his latest movie, "Jack Reacher." The system was then asked to "find me dramas." The command "Number 3" was given to choose the third option in the results, but the TV instead started a new search and offered a range of viewing options for "Sommersby."

There are some safeguards in place so that the TV wouldn't misinterpret casual conversations or gestures as actual commands. You'd need to press a button before giving a voice command, and you'd need to stand still for a few seconds and raise one hand before an on-screen cursor would appear for gesture commands.

Paul Gagnon, a TV analyst with research firm NPD Group, said these technologies are still in their early days. "Most interaction I've had with gesture and voice control ... it's not real great right now," he said. "Right now, a lot of people in the industry are just trying to explore the possibilities."

The TV makers' new interactive features fared better when they reverted to the traditional remote control format, with some twists.

Before ditching computer clunker, protect information

Once you've set up that brand new shiny PC or laptop, it's time to ditch the old clunker taking up coveted space under your desk. Before you sell or donate your old PC, however, ensure that the information you stored on it doesn't fall into the wrong hands.

Back Up Your Data: First, make sure you get everything you need off your old system because the rest of this process is irreversible. Don't count on your memory of what files are important — take a complete disk image of your computer to capture everything from data to bookmarks and application settings.

Windows users can try DriveImage XML (<http://www.runtime.org/driveimage-xml.htm>). Free to use, it creates a cloned image of your hard drive that can be restored directly from drive to drive without having to reboot. It also allows you to use your computer in tandem while it backs up your data silently in the background.

ANDREA ELDRIDGE

Mac users should consider SuperDuper (<http://www.shirt-pocket.com/SuperDuper/SuperDuperDescription.html>). Basic features are free, including easy instructions and complete cloning of your hard drive. Advanced features such as scheduled automatic backups and software updates are available for around $30.

Since you're taking the time to backup your data, it may be worth considering transferring your files to a cloud application such as Carbonite or Mozy. Carbonite includes software to automate transfer to your new PC and data storage is unlimited (www.carbonite.com, HomePlus Plan is $99/yr)

Deauthorize All DRM'd Software: When you make digital purchases online, most of them come with digital rights management (DRM) that limits their use to only a few devices. iTunes, for example, limits files to five devices and they add up quickly. For iTunes specifically, sign into your account and navigate to the iTunes store. Click on Manage Devices and remove your old PC from the list. Don't forget to check other accounts that you have DRM'd materials with, such as Adobe Creative Suites and Amazon Kindle.

Securely Reformat the Hard Drive: Simply reformatting your hard drive doesn't remove the data on it, just hides it from view and removes it from your system's index. A dedicated party can restore data from a formatted drive using recovery software. To securely delete your data, use a program that actually writes over the area of the disk where the file was stored (sometimes with multiple passes to be super safe).

Mac makes it simple in OS X. Use the Disk Utility found via the Tools menu. Choose Erase and Security Options, electing the more "secure" version. Windows users can use Darik's Boot and Nuke (www.dban.org/, free) to reformat.

Re-Install the Operating System (OS): After you've reformatted your hard drive, your computer is essentially a blank slate. As a courtesy to your buyer, reinstall the OS. Hopefully, you hung on to all those system discs that came with your computer when you purchased it.

Windows will automatically boot from the disc once you power back on, but Mac users will need to hold down the Option key to start the process. A word of caution: if you don't have your install discs, don't be tempted to install something you don't have a license for. How far you go into the install process is up to you, but the easiest method is to just power off when the computer prompts you to create a user account and leave that set up for the new owner.

Finally, if you're planning to sell it give it a thorough cleaning with a Mr. Clean Magic Eraser and some compressed air. The nicer it looks, the better your chance to get top dollar.

'Fanboy-ism' helps empire swell at Nerdist

By Jake Coyle

Associated Press

NEW YORK — There's no media entity more pleased to be called an empire than Nerdist, the online factory of earnest pop culture enthusiasm.

This is largely because in the Nerdist universe, "Star Wars" is gospel; the kind of fandom those films have inspired is in many ways Nerdist's model of engagement. It would probably cheer Nerdist creator Chris Hardwick, a comedian and TV personality turned Internet entrepreneur, if this story began in words that drifted dramatically away into space.

The force, you might say, is strong with Nerdist.

"Nerdist stuff is really just the purest expression of fanboy-ism," says Hardwick. "And it's not engineered. We are that way."

The unabashed sincerity of Hardwick and Nerdist has proved infectious. Nerdist began as a little weekly comedy podcast hosted by Hardwick and launched in 2010.

It has grown to encompass a network of 21 podcasts, 27 YouTube shows and a growing TV presence. The umbrella company, dubbed Nerdist Industries, was last year purchased by Legendary Entertainment, a big-time producer of the kind of films Nerdist swoons over, like "The Dark Knight" and "Inception."

Nerdist even boasts a kind of manifesto, a book by Hardwick called "The Nerdist Way" that comically outlines his ardent vision of an "artful nerd" — one whose fandom isn't merely critical and passive, but is passionately proactive.

The best example of this was last year when Hardwick and Nerdist organized an Olympic-style torch relay, run with a lightsaber from George Lucas' Skywalker Ranch, along the California coast from Los Angeles to Comic-Con (the Nerdist Oz) in San Diego.

In the event, dubbed "Course of the Force," Hardwick captained a replica Jabba the Hut pleasure barge down the highway.

Chris Hardwick, Nerdist creator, competes in "All Star Celebrity Bowling" recently. Nerdist began as a little weekly comedy podcast hosted by Hardwick and launched in 2010. It has grown to encompass a network of 21 podcasts, 27 YouTube shows and a growing TV presence.

Says Hardwick: "It made us go, 'Oh, well, if we can do that...'"

Buoyed by such experiences and encouraged by rising clicks and downloads, Hardwick and Nerdist Industries CEO Peter Levin are increasing Nerdist's TV presence while also exploring low-budget film possibilities.

Last month, BBC America, which has partnered with Nerdist for a number of specials, picked up "The Nerdist," a variety talk show hosted by Hardwick, for 10 60-minute episodes to premiere in the spring.

Hardwick has been a kind of cultural ambassador for BBC America in championing the series "Doctor Who" and hosts "Talking Dead" on AMC, which follows episodes of the zombie drama "The Walking Dead."

Hardwick is also producing a pilot for Comedy Central and developing a science series with National Geographic. He would like to make a science-fiction comedy film, too, along the lines of 1999's "Galaxy Quest," which Hardwick considers "a perfect movie."

In an entertainment world where comic books make blockbusters and TV shows spur cultish followings, the avenues are many for Nerdist. As Hardwick says, there's something of "a land grab with nerd culture right now." But adapting a hydra-headed digital empire into more traditional, mainstream media poses challenges, too, for the Nerdist realm.

Television is where Hardwick, the 41-year-old Kentucky-born son of pro bowler Billy Hardwick, first made his name. After a stint as a radio DJ in Los Angeles in the '90s, he started landing TV and film roles before becoming co-host of the MTV dating show "Singled Out" alongside Jenny McCarthy.

But it wasn't until a show Hardwick had high hopes for had the plug abruptly pulled that he remade himself through the Internet, starting the Nerdist website in 2008 while continuing his stand-up career.

"What I figured out five years ago, I realized you don't have to do just one job," says Hardwick, who seldom takes days off or is far from his next tweet. "There was that old idea from my parents' generation. I kind of decided: Why couldn't I make a career out of smaller freelance-y jobs, building this fortress of solitude made out of things that I like?"

"I found what my voice was by asking myself: Well, what do I like?"

The Nerdist podcast was an early success in a now flourishing world of comedy podcasts. In December, the podcasts collectively drew 4.6 million downloads. The Nerdist audience, he says, is about 64 percent male, with most in their 20s.

The podcast has attracted big-name guests like Tina Fey and Mel Brooks. Tom Hanks, a typewriter enthusiast, was lured with a 1934 Smith Corona; he accepted in a typewritten response.

The YouTube channel, among those launched with funding from the Google Inc.-owned video site in a high-profile bid to develop original content, is a partnership with Jim Henson Co. and Lorne Michaels' Broadway Video. Its shows include "All-Star Celebrity Bowling," in which TV show casts bowl against the Nerdist clan (given his father, Hardwick has skills); "Face to Face" with Weird Al Yankovic, a parody celebrity interview show; and "Star Talk" with astrophysicist Neil deGrass Tyson.

Currently running in a seven-episode season is one of Nerdist's biggest hits: Neil Patrick Harris' "Puppet Dreams," in which Harris acts out scenes with Jim Henson puppets and adult innuendo.

Just as Nerdist pulled in Hanks through a passion of his, Nerdist appealed to Harris' love of puppets. Harris, a longtime friend of Hardwick's, has been a fan of Nerdist since it launched: "I was mostly just envious of the title," he says.

"One of the things I love about Chris is he's a true finisher," says Harris. "He has expanded his empire radically and yet everything he sets his mind to accomplishing, he finishes. In this industry, you get a lot of people with great ideas but not a lot of follow-through."

Like the popular gaming online network Machinima (which has executive ties with Nerdist), the Nerdist approach is to proliferate across platforms. Levin, who cofounded the newsletter GeekChicDaily before merging it with Nerdist in 2010, is looking to put Nerdist on set-top boxes that connect to TVs. Legendary, he says, gives Nerdist more muscle.

Apple may build less expensive iPhone

By Michael Liedtke

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Apple is trying to decide whether it makes sense to offer a cheaper iPhone as it tries to boost sales in less-affluent countries and reclaim some of the market share lost to cheaper phones running Google's Android software, according to a published report.

Last week's report in The Wall Street Journal speculated that Apple could lower the iPhone's price by equipping the device with an exterior that costs less than the aluminum housing on current models.

A cheaper iPhone could come out as early as this year, or the idea could be tabled for future consideration, as has previously happened.

Citing unnamed people familiar with the matter, the Journal said Apple began assessing the pros and cons of making a cheaper iPhone in 2009 and has periodically revisited the notion. Apple Inc. declined to comment to The Associated Press.

Apple so far has stuck with an approach that has stamped the iPhone as the gold standard, a device that warrants a higher price than other smartphones.

Under this tack favored by Apple's late CEO, Steve Jobs, the company sells a premium-priced iPhone that has been updated annually with new features since its 2007 debut.

Southern's big bet

■ Construction costs continue to mount on power plant being built in Mississippi

By Jeff Amy
Associated Press

DEKALB, Miss. — In the woods of east Mississippi, a subsidiary of Atlanta-based Southern Co. is pouring billions of dollars into construction of a power plant that burns coal but would emit less carbon dioxide.

It's a response to looming federal limits on carbon emissions as regulators try to curtail global warming.

Each day, as 2,600 construction workers toil away at Plant Ratcliffe in Kemper County, the big bet becomes more expensive. The projected cost is at least $2.8 billion, almost half a billion dollars above original expectations, and some estimates say it will go higher.

Legal challenges brought by the Sierra Club have led regulators to block the company from billing customers for the costs so far, although Southern subsidiary Mississippi Power Co. got closer to that goal with a favorable lower court ruling in December.

Southern CEO Thomas Fanning stands by the plant. He says Southern's own technology will mitigate its environmental impact and the need to exploit coal as a hedge against uncertainties in the future cost of natural gas, which is currently cheap and abundant.

But there are risks.

The Kemper plant is the most expensive project ever built by Southern subsidiary Mississippi Power Co. The company promises completion in May 2014, but some engineers monitoring construction for state regulators warn the cost could reach $3.1 billion, and completion isn't likely until November 2014 at the earliest.

Workers erect a scaffold at Mississippi Power's Kemper County energy facility near DeKalb, Miss.

Those same engineers, with the firm Burns & Roe, say the plant's linchpin coal-to-gas technology isn't certain to work.

Morningstar analyst Mark Barnett says he respects Southern's ability to manage big projects, but says Kemper might dent Mississippi Power's finances if costs keep mounting. "This is an outsized project for such a small utility," Barnett said.

As the Kemper project goes on, Southern also is at work on two additional nuclear reactors at Plant Vogtle, about 30 miles southeast of Augusta, Ga. The $14 billion project will be funded in part by $6 billion from Southern subsidiary Georgia Power Co. Southern also owns Alabama Power Co. and Florida's Gulf Power Co.

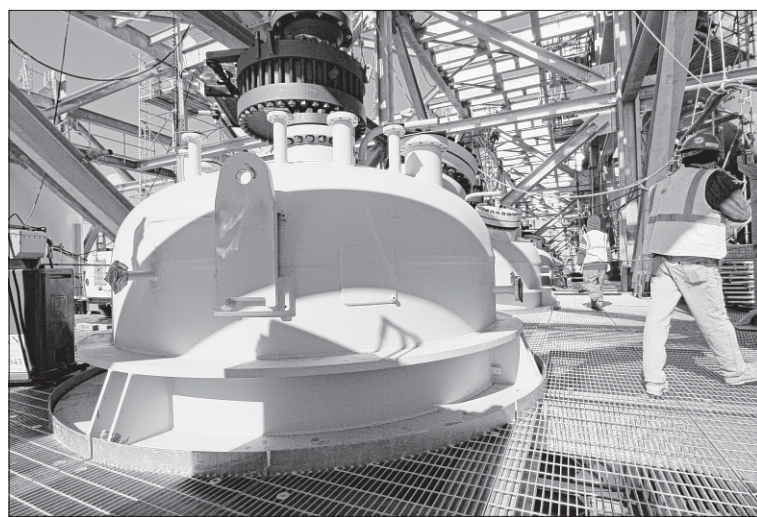

"Vogtle and Kemper County, even despite where gas prices are today, are exceedingly attractive resources for the future," Fanning told The Associated Press.

The plants reflect Southern's decision not to become overly reliant on natural gas. Fanning argues gas can't be expected to remain cheap for decades, the life cycle utilities consider for power plants.

How Kemper and Vogtle turn out are likely to define Fanning's legacy, as the company stated in the last chapter of a 534-page history it published in 2011 titled "Big Bets." The book, published for Southern's 100-year anniversary, is meant to encapsulate past lessons for future leaders.

Part of that past has been coal. Five years ago, 70 percent of Southern's power came from coal, with only 11 percent from natural gas. The company now generates 35 percent of its power from coal and 47 percent from gas.

But given federal regulations against carbon dioxide emissions, few utilities are now building coal plants.

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Workers walk past the gasifier coal feed dispense vessels at Mississippi Power's Kemper County energy facility near DeKalb, Miss., in mid-November. The plant, still under construction, is designed to use a soft form of coal called lignite in a gasification process to generate power.

Southern's response at Kemper is to convert the coal to a gas, strip out carbon dioxide and other hazardous chemicals, and burn the gas for power.

Southern expresses confidence in technology developed and tested at Wilsonville, Ala. But Burns & Roe, the engineering firm that says Kemper's cost will top $3 billion, warns "there is still a technology risk," partly associated with scaling up the gasifier to Kemper's larger size.

The company would sell the carbon dioxide to be pumped into the ground for energy companies seeking to push up more oil from old oil fields.

"We are the Saudi Arabia of coal — very high-quality stuff. We've got to find a way to continue to preserve that important national energy resource to be used for the benefit of our citizens," Fanning said. "What we're doing here in Kemper County, I think, may be a way forward for coal in America. It is that important."

The Sierra Club — which opposes coal-burning plants nationally — claims the plant could harm the environment and raise customer bills by 45 percent or more. Mississippi Power says the rise in bills would be closer to 33 percent before falling.

The Sierra Club says Southern should convert the plant to burn natural gas, an expense that could still be costly for shareholders and ratepayers.

Opponents say Mississippi Power would end up spending less money than finishing Kemper, but the company would probably try to recoup the money it's already spent.

"I think they've painted themselves into a pretty tight little corner," said Louie Miller, head of the Sierra Club's Mississippi chapter. "They decided they were going to build this thing come hell or high water."

Fanning said he is comfortable with the chips he has on the table.

"Now look, I am not a skeptic of natural gas more than any other fuel. But you cannot plan to put all your eggs in that basket. That is imprudent," he said. "What Mississippi is doing here is a big bet. But ultimately, long-term, it will serve well the interests of the families we serve here in Mississippi."

Cars & Cash

Read up on vehicles, avoid 'underpowered' reviews

Dear Tom and Ray: I am thinking of buying a new car, and I need to know if a four-cylinder or six-cylinder engine would be the wisest choice.

I live on a hilltop, 2,400 feet above the valley, and the road to my home is about five miles up the long, steep hill. I have always driven a car with six or more cylinders, and I fear that a four-cylinder would not last long climbing the hill each day. What do you advise?

— Mary

Tom: There's not an absolute answer to this, Mary. It would be like asking you if my brother should buy a shirt in XXL or XXXL. You'd be hard-pressed to give him a good answer without seeing the specific shirt and the size of my brother's spare tire.

Ray: It was a 195/65 R16 as of yesterday.

Tom: In general, engines are getting smaller and more powerful. So lots of people who used to buy V-8s are now buying sixes. And people who bought sixes are buying fours. And soon, people who've always bought fours will be buying three-cylinder engines!

TOM & RAY
MAGLIOZZI

CLICK & CLACK

RAY: And because of advanced technologies, like direct injection and turbo charging, people aren't giving up any power when they're moving down in size and weight.

Tom: So there's no general rule anymore. There are underpowered sixes and overpowered fours. What you get depends on the technologies in the engine and the car the engine is paired with.

Ray: Sometimes the manufacturer will lay out a choice of engines for you. Pickup trucks are a great example of that. Some people use their pickup trucks as suburban commuter vehicles.

So a six-cylinder engine may be all they need. Others may haul heavy equipment with their pickup, and they need the additional towing capacity of a V-8.

Tom: But we've also seen cases where a manufacturer will offer a lower-powered, older-technology "base" engine just to be able to advertise a low starting price. In that case, almost no one wants the base engine.

Ray: And then there are cases in which the base engine is really all anybody needs. The manufacturer just offers a more powerful engine to satisfy the egos of folks who want to overdo it and pay more. The Honda Accord comes to mind, with its great 185-horsepower four-cylinder engine, and its unnecessary 278-hp six.

Tom: In general, you'll pay more not only to buy a six-cylinder engine, but also to repair and maintain it over the life of the car.

Ray: We just test-drove the brand-new Ford Escape. It's a small SUV that used to come with four- and six-cylinder engine options. Interestingly, it has three different engine options now, but they're ALL four-cylinder engines.

We drove the middle one; a turbocharged, 1.6-liter four, which is tiny by SUV standards. But we were surprised to find that it had as much power as anyone might need in normal driving.

Tom: So I wouldn't necessarily recommend a six-cylinder for you, Mary. What I would recommend is that you avoid something whose reviews use the word "underpowered" a lot (unless those reviews are in enthusiast magazines like Car and Driver, which consider everything underpowered).

Ray: Once you narrow down your car choices, feel free to write back to us, and we'll give you any specific thoughts we have on those particular car-engine combinations.

But don't be afraid of modern four-cylinder engines as a class. There are more of them than ever that provide plenty of power.

Dear Tom and Ray: If I bike up a steep hill, I have to slow down, since maintaining speed would exhaust me. Applying this to driving, I drive my VW Golf up steep hills in the truck lane quite slowly to save on gas.

My wife used to disagree, but due to my persistence, even she does this, to a degree, when she is driving. I've noticed that no other cars do this. Am I nuts?

— Russell

Ray: No, you're not nuts, Russell. You're just annoying.

Tom: I mean, you're technically correct. If you drive up a hill at 45 mph rather than 65 mph, you'll use less gasoline.

Ray: You not only eliminate some wind resistance, but under certain circumstances you also may allow the transmission to shift into a higher gear, which saves you fuel.

Tom: But you're also ticking off your wife, as well as the truck driver whose Peterbilt grille is inches from your rear-view mirror because he's eager to get his trailer full of melting Eskimo Pies to Waukegan by nightfall.

Ray: You want to be careful and be aware of what's happening around you so you're not making yourself a hazard on the roadway. Because speed DIFFERENTIAL on highways does cause accidents.

Tom: If you're not causing truckers to honk and tailgate and pass you with their middle fingers extended, then it's more a question of your own priorities, Russell. Is your fuel economy more valuable to you than your time? Are you willing to accept the annoyance of others you inconvenience, including your wife, to get slightly better mileage? Or do you consider "slowing down and smelling the roses" to be just another benefit of your approach?

Ray: Actually, it's not the roses you'll smell in the truck lane. It's diesel exhaust. Good luck, Russell.

Car sharing offers pros, cons

By Samantha Bomkamp
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The ability to access a car quickly and give it back after a few hours is exploding in popularity among both college students and city dwellers.

Zipcar created the car-sharing concept in 2000. By the end of the decade car-sharing had caught the attention of the two largest U.S. car rental companies as Enterprise and Hertz started competing services. And this week, Avis, the nation's No. 3 car rental company, jumped in by offering nearly $500 million to buy Zipcar.

While car-sharing is a popular alternative for those who rely on public transit or live on walking-friendly college campuses, it's not feasible in less-populated areas. Traditional car rental companies still dominate at airports, catering to travelers that need a car while they're on business or visiting family away from home.

Here's a look at how Zipcar works, for whom it works best and what it can cost.

HOW IT WORKS

Zipcar says it caters to a younger, more tech-savvy customer who wants a simplified car-borrowing experience. Car-sharing is far quicker than a traditional rental, where you'll go to a counter and stand in line to wait for a car. And Zipcar has a fleet of small trucks that are also useful for local moves.

With Zipcar and its car-sharing brethren, customers leave a car in a city parking lot, garage or in an assigned parking space on a college campus. "Zipsters," as Zipcar calls its customers, then find the car with the name tag that matches their reservation. Viewing the make and model on the company's smartphone app allows for easier spotting.

The car is locked and unlocked with a membership "Zipcard." The keys are stashed under the dash.

Zipcars aren't often checked for cleanliness or gas in between renters (they ask that you keep a quarter-tank at all times.) That can be a downside compared with standard car rentals.

Zipcar customers fuel up using a gas card that's stored in each car. With a traditional rental, customers fill up as if it's their own car and are expected to return the car full or face a hefty per-gallon charge.

Car-sharers can extend their rental on the mobile app or by signing up for text alerts, as long as another member hasn't reserved the car already.

To return the car, bring it back to a marked parking space and swipe the Zipcard on the windshield. That stops your rental clock and tells the company that you returned the car on time.

WHAT IT COSTS

To join Zipcar, members pay a $25 application fee and $50 a year. Rates run from $7.50 an hour and include gas, insurance and any mileage racked up beyond 180 miles a day. By comparison, Hertz on Demand Standard car rental prices vary widely but generally range between $50 and $100 per day in big cities.

PROS AND CONS

■ You're generally not charged for mileage if you're renting from Hertz or Avis. "Zipsters" have to pay for any trip longer than 180 miles. For a long weekend trip, a Zipcar might not be your best bet, especially if you're driving a great distance.

■ You only have to be 21 to rent a Zipcar, or 18 if you're renting it from a university campus and have a clean driving record. Most renters have to be 25 to rent through a traditional rental car company. Sometimes, younger drivers can rent for an extra per-day fee.

■ Once you go beyond 24 hours, car-sharing is generally more expensive than a standard rental.

■ Zipcar is far larger than competitors Hertz and Enterprise, but you can link your rewards memberships through those companies and earn points for future rentals.

WHERE TO FIND IT

The car-sharing model makes the most sense in high-populated areas, which explains its popularity in major cities or on college campuses. But the number of Zipcar locations will grow once the Avis deal is complete.

Zipcar now has more than 760,000 members, triple what it had in 2008. It has 10,000 vehicles across locations in the U.S., U.K., Spain and Austria.

Tiny Chevy Sonic helped with GM comeback

The Associated Press

The Chevrolet Sonic has come out of nowhere to become the top-selling subcompact in America.

Unlike General Motors' previous small cars, the tiny Sonic handles and accelerates well and is quiet on the road. It sits low to the ground and has a curved, aerodynamic look that helps boost gas mileage to among the best in its class.

GM at first was going to name the car the Aveo after its cheap predecessor, but it was changed to distance the new car from its past.

The little Chevy has managed to shove aside established minicar leaders like the Honda Fit and Toyota Yaris to give Chevrolet a leader in a market where no one considered its products. Here's why the little car is a symbol of Detroit's comeback from financial disaster:

Honda says it will build hybrid Accord in Ohio

By Mitch Stacy
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Honda will add about 50 new jobs at its central Ohio assembly plant as it starts building a new hybrid Accord sedan there this year, the company announced last week.

The Japanese automaker said it will invest about $23 million in outfitting the plant in Marysville, near Columbus, to build the 2014 hybrid Accord. The third Honda hybrid to be built in the United States, the car will go on sale nationwide in the fall. Pricing has yet to be announced.

"Expansion is under way, and as we get into the spring and summer we'll start trial production and start hiring the new associates," company spokesman Ron Lietzke said Thursday.

The 95,000-square-foot Marysville plant is being fitted to house assembly processes for production of the two-motor Accord hybrid. That includes lengthening the main assembly line and adding space for additional assembly and parts.

A plug-in version of the hybrid Accord, built in Japan, will go on sale this spring. The company builds the Civic hybrid and Acura ILX hybrid in Greensburg, Ind.

In Ohio, Honda has assembly plants in Marysville and East Liberty, builds engines at its Anna facility and transmissions at Russells Point.

FROM THE COVER

identity,” chamber board President Herb McKee explained. EDC President Bill Thorpe agreed.

The EDC and chamber coexisted for a while in an office at 709 Second St. But in 1988, the EDC moved to the Henderson Municipal Center and the chamber moved to the ground floor of the Soaper Building, beginning a quarter-century in which the two organizations have lived (and largely functioned) apart. In 1998, the EDC moved to the former Peabody Coal Co. headquarters on Barret Boulevard, where it would remain for 14 years.

Over the years, the EDC had successes (such as attracting 11 new industries here from 1994 through 2000, assisting the city with the development of Henderson Corporate Park industrial park and helping with the development of the 800-acre Four Star Industrial Park near Roberts).

It also endured controversies, such as its recruitment of Union Carbide's Unison Transformer Services PCB processing plant to the riverport in the mid-1980s (which triggered environmental objections) and the Hudson (now Tyson) Foods poultry complex to the Roberts-Sebree area (which resulted in complaints of odor issues and cultural challenges as Hispanic workers arrived here to help staff the slaughtering plant).

The EDC also had to cope with special challenges, such as struggling to recruit electricity-intensive industries while local power generator Big Rivers Electric Corp. was in the midst of its financial crisis and bankruptcy reorganization from the mid-1980s to the late 1990s,

But the EDC, guided by the political acumen of its board president, Henderson County Judge-executive Sandy Watkins, had also developed a new skill set: regional cooperation.

The recruitment of Hudson Foods had involved the efforts of Henderson, Webster and McLean counties; the cities of Henderson and Sebree; and the community of Beech Grove.

Meanwhile, the securing of coal severance funds to buy land for a new regional industrial park had involved the cooperation of four counties — Henderson, Union, Webster and McLean — that resulted in the park's name: Four Star.

By 2004, Watkins began advocating for a regional approach to economic development. Already, Dr. John Logan and former mayor and EDC board president Dr. Bill Newman had begun talking with leaders in nearby communities.

“It's not about one county or two counties, but about doing the best thing for all of western Kentucky,” Watkins said at the EDC Annual Dinner on Sept. 21, 2004.

The retirement of the EDC's fifth executive director in 2005 provided an opening. The industrial development agent who had helped recruit an Amazon.com distribution operation to Campbellsville, Kevin Sheilley, was himself recruited to come to Henderson with the understanding that the EDC would be transforming into a new, regional organization. In November, EDC's board gave preliminary approval to changing its name to Northwest Kentucky Forward and formalizing partnerships with Union, Webster and McLean counties.

“What we were doing wasn't working,” Watkins declared at his annual State of the County address in May 2006. “Working regionally is what we felt we needed to move our community forward.” Already, NWKF had launched its first five-year pledge drive.

NWKF would expand its mission: hiring a full-time manager of existing business to focus exclusively on helping existing industries survive and expand; organizing advocacy for public education to help prepare the future work force; providing office space to the nonprofit Community Ventures Corp. to provide counseling and financing to local entrepreneurs; helping resurrect the chamber of commerce's dormant employee training consortium; and, with the help of grants, moving to the fifth floor of the Soaper Building last summer and opening a business incubator called the Northwest Kentucky Entrepreneurship Center.

Meanwhile, more than 50 years after its formation, the board of the industrial foundation last year voted to dissolve the organization and turn over its remaining assets — 27 acres near the city-county airport and some $50,000 in cash — to Northwest Kentucky Forward.

Over its first seven years, Northwest Kentucky Forward had dramatically expanded the scope of what economic development efforts meant here. Some of its initiatives — assisting small businesses, advocating for schools, providing employee training — were very much like what a chamber of commerce might traditionally pursue.

Indeed, Sheilley — who in Campbellsville came from an environment where the chamber and economic development worked under a common umbrella — and Brad Schneider, who became president of the Henderson chamber in 2008, developed a closer working relationship than had been seen between the two organizations in some years.

Yet even as Northwest Kentucky Forward assumed a broader role in the community and region's business advancement, it hardly became a household name — perhaps because it has yet to score an economic development coup, the landing of a major new industry that draws governors and congressmen to town and signals a new dawn of prosperity.

Some NWKF board members last week acknowledged what former chairman Garland Certain, a Union County banker, called “frustrations” with the organization's achievements, which manifested into difficulties in meeting goals during the organization's second five-year pledge drive in 2011.

Last October, Sheilley announced he was stepping down here to take a job in Ocala, Fla., where — not coincidentally — the chamber of commerce and economic development efforts have been newly merged into an entity called the Ocala-Marion County Chamber Economic Partnership.

Sheilley's departure created yet another opportunity to consider a change in approach.

Private meetings among some bankers and other community leaders last fall reportedly concerned whether the Henderson area's economic development effort needed a reboot — perhaps a merger with the nearly century-old Henderson Chamber of Commerce, an organization (or, at least, a name) that's more familiar to average citizens and whose stated mission is “to help local businesses grow and prosper” and “supports good works that improve the quality of life for all Henderson Countians.”

It isn't an altogether unique idea.

“Kevin discussed” the possibility of some sort of merger of NWKF and the chamber, NWKF Chairman Doug Bell said last week.

TECHNOLOGY
from 1D

Samsung's new remote has a touch-enabled track pad that swiped through menus similar to smartphone screens on Android and Apple mobile devices.

Panasonic Corp. is also including a track pad and a microphone on its new remote — though it faces similar challenges recognizing commands. A voice command for “Breaking Bad” on video brought up Google search results on a Web browser, as opposed to opportunities to watch the show.

LG Electronics Inc.'s newest “Magic Remote” controller was incredibly precise in directing where an on-screen pointer should be. It uses Bluetooth wireless technology along with a gyroscope inside the controller itself. It worked even from a great distance or when facing in the opposite direction.

take center stage at CES

The Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Some of the weirdest gadgets at the International CES show are designed to solve problems you never knew you had. Are you eating too fast? A digital fork will let you know.

Is your toddler having trouble sitting still on the potty? Let the iPotty come to the rescue. Are you bored driving to work in a four-wheeled vehicle? Climb inside a 1,600-pound mechanical spider for your morning commute.

A search for this year's strangest (and perhaps least useful) electronic devices yielded an extra-loud pair of headphones from a metal band, an eye-sensing TV that didn't work as intended and more. Take a look:

MOTORHEADPHONES: Bass-heavy headphones that borrow the names of hip-hop luminaries like Dr. Dre have become extremely popular. Rock fans have been left out of the party — until now. British metal band Motorhead, famous for playing gut-punchingly loud, is endorsing a line of headphones that “go to eleven” and are hitting U.S. stores now.

Says lead singer and bassist Lemmy Kilmister, explaining his creative input: “I just said make them louder than everybody else's. So that's the only criteria, and that it should reflect every part of the sound, not just the bass.”

PARROT FLOWER POWER: A company named after a bird wants to make life easier for your plants. A plant sensor called Flower Power from Paris-based Parrot is designed to update your mobile device with a wealth of information about the health of your plant and the environment it lives in. Just stick the y-shaped sensor in your plant's soil, download the accompanying app and — hopefully — watch your plant thrive.

HAPIFORK: If you don't watch what you put in your mouth, this fork will — or at least try to. Called HAPIfork, it's a fork with a fat handle containing electronics and a battery. A motion sensor knows when you are lifting the fork to your mouth. If you're eating too fast, the fork will vibrate as a warning.

IPOTTY: Toilet training a toddler is no picnic, but iPotty from CTA Digital seeks to make it a little easier by letting parents attach an iPad to it. This way, junior can gape and paw at the iPad while taking care of business in the old-fashioned part of the plastic potty. iPotty will go on sale in March, first on Amazon.com.
