The coroner's jury in Jamestown decided that Mrs. Chrowe's death was accidental. She was holding a door to keep her tenant from getting out with her furniture, when the tenant, Miss Sarah Wright, struck the door with a hatchet & struck through the panel into the back of Mrs. Chroe's head. Erysipilas set in from the wound & hence the death. Miss Wright may yet be indicted.

- GILLIS James Judge 23 MAR 1881
Over 50 yrs ago, James L. Gillis, now Judge Gillis of Iowa, was one of the men tried for the abduction of William Morgan, the betrayer of the secrets of Masonry. Nearly all arraigned in the trial of his alleged abductors came to some sudden end, and Judge Gillis long since survived all those who were associated with him. A few years ago one of his sons was called to the door and shot down...week before last, another was shot in the same way, and the judge and his friends firmly believe the tragedies trace back to the Morgan affair. Judge Gillis is father of Mrs. S. A. Porter of Mayville.
